PREFACE.

THE present volume is the third of a series, containing selections from the ancient Records of the Burgh of Stirling; and thus the work which was so well begun by the Town Council of the Burgh, and continued under the auspices of the Glasgow Stirlingshire and Sons of the Rock Society, is in the meantime brought to a close. In these volumes an effort has been made to present in an accessible form the principal items of historical and social interest preserved in the Records; and though, on account of the mass of material dealt with, omission and compression had to be largely practised, it is hoped that the object aimed at will be found to have been fairly well attained. During the period over which the selections extend, 1124-1752, there are many gaps in the narrative of events, owing to the loss of books and documents, but from 1597 onwards the continuity is better maintained, as all the subsequent Council Minutes have been preserved.

For the completion of the undertaking at this particular time, we are specially indebted to Sir MICHAEL CONNAL. Having taken a leading part in promoting the issue of the previous volume, and knowing something of the materials that still remained, Sir MICHAEL was fully persuaded of the importance of proceeding farther; and being apprehensive that, if the work was not accomplished while the subject was still fresh in the minds of those who had interested themselves in it, its continuation might be indefinitely postponed, he, with characteristic decision and zeal in a good cause, authorised the preparation of the volume now produced.

The book consists chiefly of selections from the Council Minutes, ranging from 1667 to 1752; but it is enriched from other sources, notably the Accounts of the Burgh. Of the existence of these I was not aware when preparing the previous volume; but the opportunity has now been taken of giving extracts, beginning with the earliest—though of a date anterior to the Minutes. The Accounts are not in an unbroken series, and the earlier ones are merely abstracts; but it is gratifying to find many interesting incidental allusions to current events at particular junctures in history, such as the environment of Stirling by Cromwell's troops in 1651, and the subsequent occupation of the town by the English; the Revolution of 1688, and the efforts made at that time to quell disturbances in the Highlands; and the Rebellions of 1715 and 1745.

Another record (Protocol Book, 1469-84) has been used, though only to a necessarily limited extent (Appendix I.). Stray leaves from this Protocol had been examined, and abstracts of some of the entries given in the previous publications[1]; but since then the remainder and principal part of the book has been discovered. Being the oldest record now in the possession of the burgh, and being full of allusions to persons and property in Stirling and district, its examination—for which a newly prepared Table of Contents, containing a brief summary of each entry, affords convenient facility—may be commended to those desirous of investigating local family history.

Appendix IV., "Extracts from the Guildry Records," has been contributed by Mr. WILLIAM B. COOK, editor of the Stirling Sentinel. Mr. COOK had investigated these records some years ago, and made copious extracts; and on learning that I intended to examine them for the purposes of this volume, he generously placed his work at my disposal, and afterwards took the trouble of selecting from his collections what is printed, and revising the proof-sheets. For revisal, access to the original records had to be obtained, and this was courteously given by their custodier, Mr. R. MACLUCKIE, Clerk to the Guildry.

Mr. DAVID DONALDSON, author of the Supplement to Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary, to whom, while preparing last volume, I was indebted for solving many of the phraseological puzzles occurring in the earlier records, and for his aid with the Glossary, has kindly supplied the Glossary to the present volume. Not only so, but he has also read over all the proof-sheets, and made amendments where necessary: one of the good results of which is that the book possesses, in a greater degree than is usually found in similar works, the eloquence of correct punctuation.

In the Plan prefixed to the volume Mr. A. B. M'DONALD, C.E., Glasgow, has exercised his professional skill in delineating the main features of the town and its surroundings as they existed about the year 1700. For the more thorough accomplishment of his object Mr. M'DONALD, in addition to his own local knowledge and the information he has gleaned by a painstaking examination of the Records and other sources, has had the privilege of perfecting the Plan in conjunction with Bailie RONALD and Mr. GALBRAITH, Town-Clerk, both of whom possess exceptional knowledge of the subject. The Plan may therefore be regarded as being the nearest approach to correctness and reliability now attainable.

For the kind aid which the esteemed Town-Clerk of the burgh has afforded me while engaged in the preparation of these volumes of Stirling Records I must be allowed to express my grateful acknowledgment. Mr. GALBRAITH has throughout been ever ready and anxious to trace and furnish records and documents, and to assist in other respects, without regard to the trouble and encroachment on his time; always, indeed, manifesting such an interest in the work as to make communication with him on the subject of the Records a pleasure.

R. RENWICK.

[1] On 14th March, 1681, there was produced to the council a gift under his Majesties great seal dated 24th December preceding, granting an impost, for the space of 17 years, of 20 s. Scots on each boll of malt brewed and consumed in the burgh, or 2 d. on each pint of ale, for defraying the public debts. The council consented to the impost, subject to the approval of the trades, and farther agreed that if they preferred a voluntary contribution the amount levied would be restricted to a merk on each boll (13s. 4d.), "and that upon the payment therof the respective trades are to be frie of all cess, ministers stipends, drnmmer and pyper's fialls." Divided opinions were given in by the trades incorporations as to the impost, but, seeing a majority of the council approved of the modified proposal, a committee was appointed to frame the draft of the security to be given to the trades. The act of relief, approved of on 19th May, 1681, narrates that the levying of 13 s. 4 d. on the boll was agreed to by the guildry and trades on condition that the whole inhabitants were relieved of ministers' stipends, drummers' fees, cess, and all public burdens, except quartering and outputting of militia, and that all houses belonging to persons residing outwith burgh, and all areable land in and about the burgh belonging to any one, should pay public burdens as formerly. The royal gift (the procuring of which cost £5006 13 s. 4 d.) was on 21 May 1681 produced and "put up in the boill."

Forasmuch as the Kings most excellent Majestie haith, by a letter direct under his royall hand to his privie cownsell, signified that wheras by his royall letter of twelt day of September last his Majestie did signifie his royall pleasure for suspending the electione of magistrats in the royall burrowes of this his ancient kingdom untill his Majestie should think fitt to declaire his royall pleasure theranent to his privie cownsell, and that the same should be by ther act intimat unto them respectivly; and his Majestie being now resolved to nominat and appoynt the persones underwrittin magistrats, cownsellers, and clerk, for the brugh of Strevling, as such whom he judges most loyall and readie to promott his service and most forward to support the good and interest of the said burgh; wherfor the lords of his Majesties privie cownsell, in persueance of his Majesties commands aforsaid, doe heirby nominat and appoynt Hugh Kennedye of Schelloch to be proveist of the said burgh of Striveling, [here follow the names of bailies, councillors, treasurer, clerk, and others, all of whom accepted office and took the test].

21 October 1686.

Deane of gild for this fair.

The proveist, baillies and counsell, in regaird that Alexander Jack his being furth of the kingdome, and that he is nominat dean of gild to this burgh be his Majesties counsell for this yeir to come, and considering the necessatie ther is that one officiatt in his pleace tomarrow for visiting the chapmen stands, they nominat and appoynt Thomas Millar, baillie, in his pleace tomarrow for doeing therof.

25 October 1686.

Act in favores of Proveist Kennedye.

The bailies and cownsell taking to ther consideratione that amongst the rest of Robert Russall and his relationes ther malicious and unwarrantable proceidings whyll they wer in the magistracie against seaverall honnest and weill deserving men within this burgh, whos respect to the good and interest of the samen would not allow them to complye with the said Robert Russall and his relationes in their acts and desyres, and that ther was ane act of counsell ishued out by them on the eight day of March j^{m} vj^{c} eightie four yeiris, wherby, upon pretext of Hugh Kennedy, present proveist of this burgh, (therin designed lait proveist) his alledgeat dissobedience to them as then magistrats, and refering himself to the then counsell anent his losseing the privilege of being ane burges and gild brother, they most unjustly declaired and decerned the said Hugh Kennedy to have omitted and tint his said privileg and freedome of the said burgh, and that the samen should be null to him and his successione in all tym comeing; which act being considered this day be the saids baillies and cownsell, with the unjust grounds and pretences wherupone the samen was founded, they all of one consent find and declair that the said Robert Russall and his relationes hes most unwarrantablie and maliciously proceedit in the said matter, and therfor declairs the forsaid act and haill contents therof to be null in all tyme comeing, and the said Hugh Kennedy to have the privileg of ane burges and gild brother of this burgh, and that his said privilege shall be as effectwall to him and his successione as if the said act had never bein maid; and ordains James Norie, ther clerk, to mark upon the marginis of the said act that this day the samen is declared null and the said Hew Kennedy restored to his former privileg as said is. Act in favores of Proveist Kennedye.

29 January 1687.

The councill taikeing to their consideratione the severall supplicationes given in be James Miller, tacksman of the customes of the troan from Mertimes 1684 to Mertimes 1685, James Dick, tacksman of the Borrowsyet the said space, Androw Thomsone, tacksman of the bridge the said space, and Thomas Reoch, tacksman of the meal mercat the samen space, mentioning that quhair they, and ilk ane of them, hes sustained great and considerable loss as tacksmen forsaid through the late Argyle his rebellione, quhich occasioned the ceasing of all trade and commerce the most part of the space above writtin; which being sufficientlie understood to the councill, they have quat and heirby quytes and gives doune to ilk ane of the saids petitioners tua moneths of the forsaid yeares tack duetie, and ordaines James Miller who was treasurer that year to defalk the same to them. It is alwayes provyded that quhatevir was quat by the former magistrats to any of the saids petitioners is to taike noe effect, bot shall be interpret as ane part of the saids tua moneths now quat as said is. Act in favores of the townes tacksmen.

29 March 1687.

The council appoyntes John Moir, toune treasurer, to acquaint John Nimmo that they have discharged his sending here of the newes letters in all tyme comeing. Newes lettres.

Pyper, drummer, and post.

The councill taiking to their consideratione the great debt and burdein contracted upon the toune by the former magistrats, quhairby without augmenting of the said debt they cannot allow the sellaries underwrittin, thairfoir they have unanimouslie discharged and hereby discharges the offices of toune drummer, pyper, and post, in all tyme heireafter dureing the councills pleasure, and lykewayes discharges the payment of their former sellaries to them or any of them dureing the space forsaid.

Act in favores of John Dick.

The councill taiking to their consideratione how unjustlie the former magistrats, being acted by splen and malice against John Dick, conveener, did constraine him to pay ane hundered poundes Scotes moneye upon the accompt of some alleadgit damnadge done by him to the tounes milnes and damms, therfore they ordaine John Moir, treasurer, to repaye the said soume to the said John Dick.

Schoolmaster.

The counsill, upon certane considerationes, declares Mr. William Broune, schoolmaster of the said burgh, frie from the payment of the merk of the boll of malt to be browen be him for the use of his familie in all tyme heirafter.

19 September 1687.

Privie councillis lettre prohibiting election.

The proveist, baillies, and councill of the said burgh, being conveened for filling up the merchand councill in order to the electione appoynted to be upon the xxiiij instant conforme to ane act of the xij instant, the lettere underwrittin from the lords of his Majesties privie councill prohibiting and dischargeing the electione of new magistratis and councelloris during his Majesties pleasure, and authorizing the proveist, baillies, and councill present to continwe and exerce quhile his Majestie should signifie his furder pleasure, was produced and publictlie red, wherunto the saidis proveist, baillies, and councill gave obedience, and appoyntis the said lettre to be recorded in the councill bookes, quhairof the tenor followes:—Affectionat frinds,—Wheras his most sacred Majestie hes, by his royal lettere dated at the court at Bath the eight of September instant, signified that all electiones in royal burrowes be suspended untill his Majesties royal pleasure be knoune theiranent, you are theirfoir, in persueance theirof, heirby expresslie prohibited and discharged, as you will ansuere at your perrill, to elect any new magistratis or councill within your burgh this yeare, and yow and the present magistratis and councill are by his Majesties authoritie heirby authorised to continwe and exerce as magistratis and councill untill his Majestie shall signifie his further pleasure. Signed, in name and by warrand of his Majesties privie councill, by your affectionat frind. Sic Subscribitur: HAMILTON, I. P. D. Edinburgh, 16th September, 1687. The councill appoyntes their Majesties King William and Queen Marie to be proclamed at the Cross the morrow with all solemnitie.

1 June 1689.

John Murray of Towchadam, Sir Alexander Hope of Kerse, George Stirling of Herbertshire, William Cunninghame of Boqwhan, and Alexander Monro of Bearcrofts, oversiers nominat and appoynted by the estates of this kingdome to the electione of the magistrats and council of this burgh till Michaelmes nixt, conforme to ane act made by the saids estates and ordor emitted by them prorogatting the dyet of the said electione till this day, haveing mett in obedience to the said act and ordour, as also James Norie, towne clerk of Sterling, and James Finlaysone, writer there, who is joyned by the said act of estates with the said James Norie as to the mater of the said electione, being present, and having in obedience to the said act conveened the haill habil burgessis for giving in their votes and lists in ordor to the samen electione, the saidis oversiers ordained the said James Norie to read and publish the said act of estates, and ordor prorogatting the samen electione till this day, which accordinglie he did and quhairof the tenour followes:—At Edinburgh the eightine day of Apryle 1689 yeares. The estates of this kingdome having heard and considered a representatione made from the commissioneris from the royall burrowes for regulating the magistracie and councilis theirof, bearing that it was their opinione that the haill burghs forsaid should have a new electione of magistrats and councill by the pol of the burgessis bearing burding in the respective burghs, excluding honorarie burgessis, tounes servantis, pensioners, and beedmen; and alsoe having considered the representationes made by several burghs why they ought to continue their magistracie and council, as being frielie elected according to their privileges and constitutiones; the estates doe find that generallie the haill forsaid royall burghs have suffered incroatchments upon their liberties and privileges by lettres and recomendatiounes from the King, his councill, and otheris having power and influence, wherby these severall yeares past many of the burgesses otherwayes qualified to elect and be elected have bein debarred; therfor the estates doe give ordor for ane new electione of the ordinarie magistrats and council of the towne of Sterling to continue till the ordinar tyme about Michaelmes nixt, and to be chosen by the pol at the said burgh of Sterling the eleavint day of May nixt, and the estates doe nominat and appoynt Sir Alexander Hope of Kerse, the lairds of Glentirren, Polmais, Herbertshyre, Buchwhan, Powhowse, and Commissar Monro, or any tuo of them, to be present and sie the said electione made; and ordaines James Norie, towne clerk, and James Finlaysone, who is heirby joyned with the said James Norie as to the mater of the electione of the saidis magistrats of Sterling, to conveene the habile burgesses, and in caice either of the foresaidis persones their refusal that the accepter shall proceed in the said electione in the samen maner as was formerlie ordored and appoynted in the electione of the magistrats and towne councill of Edinburgh and Dundie. Extracted owt of the records of the meetting of estates by me. Sie subscribitur: JA: DALRYMPLE, Cl.

Als followes the ordor for prorogating the dyet of electione to this day:—Edinburgh, May 8, 1689. The committie of estates having heard a representation that their was ane uncertaintie of the dyet of the electione of the magistrats and council of the towne of Sterling, whither upon the tent or eleavint instant, wherby the oversiers and inhabitantis might be in dowbt when to attend, and that some of the inhabitants who had right and privilege of voting in the said ellectione are called as witnessis in the complaint against Mr. James Hunter, minister in the said towne, to appear befor the said committie the tent instant, they doe therfore hereby continue the said electione of the saids magistrats and council till the first day of Junij nixt, at quhich tyme ordaines the said electione to proceed by the pol conforme to the act of estates direct theiranent. Sic Subr: ROSSE, Pr.

Theirafter the saidis oversiers recomended to the haill respective electoris to nominat and appoynt four of their number at ingiving of all the lists, that in caice any inhabile persones should intrude themselves the persones soe appoynted might give in their objectiones against them, and accordinglie Duncan Watsone, younger, and John Burd, late baillies, John Dick, dean of gild, and Harie Chrystisone, merchand, wer named by the haill electores and did attend and give in their objectiones in maner underwrittin. And the saidis James Norie and James Finlaysone, clerkes, being appoynted to proceed in calling of the haill habile burgessis and receaving in of their lists, it was protested by the said John Burd that befor farder procedour the towne council book might be produced befor the oversiers in respect of ane act therin bearing ane oath made by the towne council, wherby no magistrat is to continue longer in office than tuo yeares togither, and that no magistrat is aither to accept of the said office or voyce for any to continue longer then the said space,[1] and whatever persone under that obligatione shall offer to voyce contrare therto he protests that their votes might not be respected, and for remead of law. To quhich it was ansuered by the said Henrie Chrystie that their was no such act produced, and, albeit it wer, oppones the act of estates allowing ane frie election without any reservatione except onlie townes servants, honorarie burgesses, pensioners and beedmen.

Poll election of the magistrats and councill.

It was objected by the said Duncan Watsone that John Dick, dean of gild, was neither capable to elect or be elected in respect he was ane townes servant, had ane yearlie pensione of them, and therby incapable conforme to the estates act; to quhich it was answered that he was ane tenent of the townes, payed them ane yearlie tack duetie, bot had noe pensione from the towne.

It was lykewayes protested by the said John Dick againest proveist Russall, baillie Watsone, and their relationes, that they having missmannaged the comon good of this burgh for quhich they are inhibite and process raised against them befor the lords, and upon that accompt theye were neither capable to elect nor be elected.

It was lykewayes protested by the said Duncan Watsone against proveist M'Culloch that he was neither capable to elect nor be elected, in respect of his missmannagement of the townes comone good, quhairby he had contracted above four thousand merkes upon the townes score beyond the yearlie revenues, and that his accompts hes bein severall tymes revised by the towne council and not allowed in respect of the extravagancie therof.

And as to the alleadgit malversationes committed by proveist Russall and his relationes, it was answered that, if any be, the protester, John Dick, was art and pairt and since hes allowed of the accompts under his hand; as alsoe the said Duncan oppones that same objection against baillie Burd, being baillie with proveist M'Culloch and concurring with him in his malversationes.

It was also objected that Robert Russall, elder, being ane townes servant, in soe far as he collects the merk upon the boll of malt, multure, and impost, in place of Hugh Kennedye, and he neither bearing scot nor lot with the remanent burgesses, ought not ather to elect nor be elected. To which it was answered that, as to the first pairt alleadging him to be ane townes servant, his collecting the merk upon the boll with the multur and impost is by warrand from Hugh Kennedye, principall collectour therof, appoynted by the towne council during the said Hugh his absence, and hes no allowance theirfoir from the towne, soe that he can noewayes be frustrat of his libertie in voting as ane burges, sieing he is willing to dimitte his charge at the ingiving of his leet befor he wer frustrat therof. As to the second it can be instructed that he beares his proportionall pairt of all publict burdings with the rest of the burgessis according to his abilitie and capacitie.

Poll election of the magistrats and councill.

It was lykewayes objected against Robert Henderson, elder, weaver, that he not being ane burges owght not to vote.

It was also objected against John Chrystie in Spittell that he not being ane residenter within this burgh could not vote. To quhich it was answered that he is ane burges of the burgh and hes borne portable burding with the remanent burgesses these xxiiij yeares bygone.

It was also objected against John Edmondstone, elder, gairdner, that he could not vote not being within the privilege of the burgh aud never bearing portable burding with the rest of the neighboures; to which it was answered that he beares publict burding, their being ane ensigne presentlie quartered on him.

It was objected against James Andersone, maltman, that his vote could not be sustained he being absent himselfe and in health; to quhich it was answered that he should compeir and owne his list befor the oversiers removed.

It was objected against James Watsone, maltman, that he not living within the jurisdictione of the burgh nor bearing portable burding his vote could not be respected. It was alsoe objected against Cudbert Andersone that he being absent furth of towne his vote in wreat could not be sustained. It was objected against Jonathan Dropper that he being ane townes servant under the beddall, and having ane yearlie pensione upon that accompt, ought not to have ane vote. It was lykewayes objected against Robert Chambers in respect of his absence out of towne. It was objected against James Willisone in respect he lives not within towne, and against Harie Duncan in respect of his absence. It was alsoe objected against Hugh Willisone and Thomas Murdoch that they ought not to have the benefite of ane vote in this electione in respect they neither resyde within this burgh nor beares portable burding with the rest of the neighboures; to quhich it was answered by Harie Chrystie that he oppones the ansure made by John Burd to the objectione against James Willisone in soe far as concernes this objection against Hugh Willisone; and as to the objectione against Thomas Murdoch it is offered to be instructed that he watched and warded with the inhabitants this year and payed his proportional pairt of the outreik of the militia with the remanent burgesses.

Poll election of the magistrats and councill.

It was farder objected by the said John Burd againest provost Russall and Duncan Watsone that, the one being provost and the other dean of gild, about threttine yeares agoe did, without aither law, reasone, or authoritie, impose upone the inhabitants of this burgh, including both masteris and servants above sixtine yeares of age, ane pol of tuentie shillings Scotes for their oune privie interests and designs, and therefore theye are incapable to vote. To which it was auswered that quhatever they did they had ane act of council approving it, and this objectione omitted at the ingiving of the leett owght not now to be admitted.

It was lykewayes protested by the said John Burd againest John Stevinsone, maltman, that he could not be heard to vote in respect he was ane townes servant as quarter master and had ane pensione upon that accompt; to which it was answered by the said Harie Chrystie that the objectione being false and calumnious noe respect ought to be had therto.

It was alsoe protested by the said John Burd that non of the tacksmen of the townes revenues owght to have ane vote in this electione because albeit they stand obleidged to pay ane definit tack duetie yet the same was conditional, soe that in caice the tack dueties could not be made up they wer to have ane ease therof. To quhich it was answered by the said Henrie Chrystie that he opponed the towne council book wherin they are obleidged to pay the said tack dewtie without any such conditione, neither was the towne concerned with the tacksmen bot onlie the towne treasurer, who is comptable to the towne and had taken cautione of the tacksmen for his securitie of the said tack duetie, and albeit they should never make up the samen yet it was upon the treasurers and not the townes hazard.

And the saids burgessis having compeired and given in their severall listis, the saidis oversiers and clerks did proceed in the perusing and marking therof, and the day being spent the saidis oversiers sealled all with the marking of the votes within anc bag, and recomended to the saidis John Murray of Touchadam, Sir Alexander Hope of Kerse, George Stirling of Herbertshire, Robert Rollo of Powhowse, or any two of them, to proceid to the consideratione of the remanent listis upon Monday nixt, the thrid instant, be eight o'clock in the morning, and to collect the saidis remanent votes and declare the said electione according to the haill votes, with respect alwayes to the objectiones made by all the foirnaimed persones in caice the cleir and unquestionable votes of otheris should not finalie determine the said electione; and farder they ordaine that, whenever the ellectione should be concluded, the wholl lists together with the clerkis roll of the burgessis should be sealled againe within the said bag, to remaine in the clerkis handis as the ground of the said electione, to be made furthcomeand in caice of any question theranent.

Act anent elders.

It was represented to the councill by David Moir, present dean of gild, that the united presbetries of Stirling and Dumblaine were of designe (as he was informed) to nominat and approve of ane list of elders distinct from the list given in in dew tyme by the magistrats and councill, who by the lawes and constant custome of this realme have the sole and privative facultie and power to elect and present elders to the presbetrie to be only approven by them, thairfor, in preservatione of thair undoubted right and uninterrupted privilledge, the saids magistrats and councill have authorized and hereby authorizes John Dick, present provest, [the dean of gild and convener,] to compeir befor the saids presbetries when and quhair they shall happen to meitt at any tyme befor admitting of the said distinct list of elders, and in name of the said councill, for themselves, and as representing the heall communitie of this burgh, to protest against the saids united presbetries thair procedour for the reasones followeing,—Primo, because the samen is flatly contrair to the privilledge of this burgh, it haveing bein the constant and undoubted right of the magistratis to give in the list of the elders to the presbetries, and they haveing, in persewance of thair said right and according to the undoubted privilledge of the burgh and the constant and uninterrupted practice of thair predicessouris, given in a list of the neighbours condeschended upon by the said councill for exerceing of the office of elders to be examined, (and if found qualified) by the saids presbetries to admitt and receave the saids elders given in by the councill; and in caice any of the said number whome the said councill hes nominat shall refuise to accept of the said office lett the saidis presbetries returne a list of them that doeth refuise to accept to the said councill and they shall nominat others in their places who may except of the saids offices. Secundo, to protest against any of the burgessis of this burgh thair accepting of the said office of eldership by the presbetries nominatione, seing by thair burges oath they are bound to preserve and not to infringye any of the privilledges of the communitie. Tertio, but prejudice of the generalitie of the foirsaid protestationes, to protest against livetennant collonell John Ereskine, governour of Stirling castle, John Ereskine, captaine livetennant thair, and (blank) Traill, ensigne thair, that they nor none of them be receaved elders in the comunitie of this burgh, seing they doe not so much as live within the privilledge thairof, and it is a thing yet unheard of that any man can be ane elder of a parioch within quhich he does not recide. And upon the ground above represented and others to make thair protestatione as aforesaid, and to appeall to thair Majesties and the lords of their Majesties most honourable privy councill for remead and redress of the incrochmentis made upon the privilledges of the communitie of the samen burgh, and thairupon

Defending Mr. Robert Rule's bill.

The magistrates and councill takeing to thair consideratione that Mr. Robert Rule and his elders have, in pursueance of the bill given in by them to the privie councill against the saids magistrats and councill, made intima-tione therof to them, and that it is necessar and incumbent that the saids magistrats and councill should attend the privie councill and vindicatt themselves from the aspersiones and calumnies lybellit against them, they in ordour thairto unanimouslie appoint John Dick, present provest, [and two others,] to goe to Edinburgh and defend themselves and the comone interest of this burgh against the said lybell, and to doe evrie other thing theranent.

Defending Mr. Robert Rule's bill.

23 June 1694.

It was represented to the councill by John Dick, provest, that he was informed some persones had calumniat him by venting that he had threatned the elders of this burgh with perjurie and banishment furth of the toune that day that the said elders were called to the clarks chamber befor they were installed by Mr. Rule, and seing anything that past at that tyme was in face of the toune councill, the said provest desyred for his oune vindicatione that the councill might give thair opinions and sentiments theiranent, which being considered by the magistrats and councill they unanimously declair that the provest vented noe such expressiones, and that the said assertione is altogether calumnious, which they will be readie to declare upon thair oaths quhen called therto.

Calumnies against the provost.

It was lykewayes represented to the magistrats and councill by the said provest Dick that he was informed thair was ane lybell reased by John Burd and otheris against the heall magistratis and councill, by quhich thair was noe less designed then a totall overthrow of the saids magistrats and councill, and thairfor desyred to know if the councill or any of their number would concurr with the said John Burd in the said persuite, or quhither they thought it more just to defend against him and to adhear to and vindicat the saids magistrats and councill, and quhither the expenses of the said plie should be payed by the magistrats and councill themselves or out of the commone good of the said burgh; which being considered by the councill they unanimously declyne and disoune the foirsaid malicious persuite, and declare they will adhear to and concurr for defence and vindicatione of the present magistrats and councill, and appoyntis the haill expences that may be depursed thairanent to be payed by the treasurer; and recommends to the provest to goe in to Edinburgh and attend the calling of the foirsaid lybell, and to imploy advocatts and otheris necessar for defending of the toune.

Act in favours of the Incorporation of weavers.

The incorporation of weavers of the burgh of Stirling are possessed of two extracts of the following act, under the hands of James Finlayson, then town clerk, although the same is not insert in this record, and at desire of the said incorporation the following copy is insert at Stirling, 9th July, 1776:—

Stirling, the seaven day of September one thousand seaven hundred and three years. The magistrates and councill of the said burgh being conveened in their ordinary meeting place, there was ane petition given in to them by John Finlayson, present deacon of the weavers within the samen burgh, for himself and in name and behalf of the whole remnant members of the said trade, mentioning that where, in anno j^{m} vj^{c} and eighty seven,[1] the magistrates and councill of the said burgh for the time did by there act strictly prohibite and discharge all unfree or country weavers whatsomever from buying of any wooline or linnine yairne, thereafter to be brought to this burgh for sale, except upon the publick mercate place and after elleaven o'clock each mercate day, under the pain of confiscation thereof and otherwayes punishing both buyers and seller as the saids magistrates should think fit; which act has not only contribute to the good and encouradgement of the petitioners trade but also to the whole other burgesses and inhabitants of this burgh who are noways restricted thereby, and likeways has been the occasion of the incress and grouth of soe considerable ane yarne mercate as is now weekly within this burgh: but in regaird there is an cunning and frawdulent practice lately crept into the said mercate by some unconscionable people there exposing to sale therein certane quantitys of yarn not only short of the ordinary ell lenth, which as to wooline yairne conform to express act of parliament ought to be thirtie seavin inches, but also there is a new and deceitfull method contrived in making up the hesps of yarn double in one part and single in another (one of which hesps so made up the petitioner did produce to the said magistrates and council), and which fraud is hardly perceptible by the most cautious buyers; and farder, ane great part of the said yairne daylie brought to the said mercate comes short of the just tale thereof, wanting a great many threads of six score to the cutt, by which both the petitioners and the whole neighbourhood are cheated and abused; and therefor humblie creaving that the saids present magistrats and councill would take the premisses to consideration, and by their act not only to ratify and approve of the former act of councill, bot also to prohibite and discharge the bringing and exposing to sale in this mercate for the future all woolin or linnen yarn any way short of the true lenth it ought to be or wanting anything of the true tale of the cutt, and that under such ane penalty as the councill shall think fitt, and that besydes cutting of the yarne at the cross conform to the practice and custom of other burghs, as at more length is contained in the said petition. Which being considered by the saids magistrates and councill, they unanimouslie not onlie ratifie and approve of the act of councill above mentioned in the whole points thereof and appoint the same to take effect and be put to all due executione in time comeing, bot also have prohibited and hereby strictlie prohibite and discharge the bringing or exposing to sale in this mercate in any time to come all wooline or linnen yarn any way short of the true lenth it ought to be, or wanting anything of the true tale of the cutt, and that under the penalty of fyve pounds Scots money ilk person contraveining, toties quoties, besides confiscation of the yarn or cutting thereof at the cross; and any of the weavers or other neighbours who shall happen either to buy or see any of the said prohibited yairn are hereby discharged to compone or transact with the owners theirof any manner of way, or otherways conceal the said fraud, under the like penalty of five pounds Scots money ilk person, toties quoties, as said is; and ordain these presents to be published at the mercate cross that non may pretend ignorance.

Act approving address to his Majesty signed.

28 April 1716.

The magistrates and council considering that through the decease of John Cunninghame of Ballendalloch, writer to the signet, late agent for the burgh, there is none appointed to advert to the concerns thereof at Edinburgh, and knowing the care, fidelity, and sufficiency of William Cunninghame now of Badindalloch, his eldest sone, writer to the signett, for serving this burgh in room of his said father, therefore, and as a testimony of their gratitude to his memory for his faithfull service to them, nominat and appoint the said William Cunninghame, his sone, agent for this burgh during the councills pleasure, and appoint the former sallary, of fourty eight pound Scots and three pound to his servant yearly, to commence from Whitsunday next to come, to be payed by the said burgh or their treasurer to the said William Cunninghame and his servant accordingly.

Nomination Ballendalloch, agent for the burgh.

Allows two shillings sterling weekly to Archibald Moir, jaylor, from the first of March last to the first of May nixt, in regaird to his being obliged to hyre a servant to assist in serving and keeping the prison because of the multitude of prisoners therein.

2 shillings sterling weekly to be paid the jaylor.

28 July 1716.

Act for strict execution of law against disorderly marriadges.

The magistrats and town councill of the said burgh being conveened, taking to their serious consideration that, notwithstanding of the good and wholsome laws and constitution of state and church in this kingdome, clandestine and irregular marriadges, as crimes of the most dangerous consequence, be strictly discharged and severly punishable, and particularly by the thirty fourth act, first session, first parliament, Charles the Second, it is amongst other things therin enacted that whoever marries in a clandestine unorderly way, or by persons not authorized by the church, shall be imprisoned for three moneths and besides shall pay, the nobleman one thousand pounds, the gentleman and burges five hundered pounds, and each other person one hundered merks, and that they remain in prison while they pay, and the fynes to be applyed to pious uses of the parioch where they dwell, that the celebrator be banished not to returne under the pain of death, and that such as are unable to pay be punished with stocks and irons, and that but prejudice of the churchis inflicting her censures upon the transgressors; and likewayes that by the twelvth act, fifth session of King William and Queen Maries first parliament, the prosecutione of clandestine marriadges is allowed to every procurator fiscal; and that by the sixth act, seventh session, said parliament, it is declared that the persons so married are oblidged when required to declare the names of the celebrator and witnesses under the pains following, viz., the nobleman two thousand pound, the landed gentleman two thousand merks, any other gentleman or burges one thousand pound, and any other person two hundred merks, and to be imprisoned till they so declare and pay; and it is also thereby declared that the celebrator may be summarly seized by any magistrate or justice of peace, and is punishable not only with banishment but by such pecunial or corporal pains as the council shall think fitt, and the witnesses are thereby lyable in the sum of one hundered pound toties quoties to be applyed for pious uses as above: Yet, notwithstanding of these excellent laws, by reason of the not punctual and exact execution thereof the foresaid haynous offence has greatly incressed and being frequently practised, and nowhere else more than in this place, to the great dishonour of God, scandle of our holy religion, and discredit of the place, seing by such marriadges the crying sin of bigamy much overspreads by severalls that stand married to others at the same time, there being in that disorderly way married to other wives, as is of late too weell knowen in the place, which if not speedily prevented by the punctual execution of the foresaids laws will undoubtedly draw down the wrath and displeasure of a holy God upon the congregation where such wickednesses so much abound; and the saids magistrats and council being deeply weighted with a sense of and humbly greeved for these and other abominations in this place, do therefore and for averting the just displeasure of God that such offences threaten, and for the more effectual curbing of such sins for the future, by this their act firmly resolve and declare that on all occasions and in all time coming they will strictly exert their power and authority by the vigerous execution of the foresaids laws and acts against all persons offenders who transgress the same, of whatever quality or rank, without exception or exemption, and that no intreaty or influence for the least mitigation thereof shall take place or prevail with them to the contrair; and sincerly recomend to the minister of this burgh to intimate thir presents from the pulpit on ane Lords day immediatly after divine worship, that none may pretend ignorance of the same.

Act for strict execution of law against disorderly marriadges.

18 August 1716.

The magistrats and toun councill of the said burgh being conveined, and having received in ane complaint be baillie Martine and the procurator fiscall of the samen burgh against Patrick Gillespie, late baillie there, for ane indignitie and other abuse thereinmentioned done and offered be him yesternight to baillie Martine, on accompt whereof baillie Burd had committed the said baillie Gillespie to prison, after the councills having found the complaint relevant and taken probation thereon as marked on the back thereof, the said magistrats and councill approved of what the said baillie Burd had so done in the foresaid affaire, and found that the said baillie Burd had not malversed in his office thereby, and that baillie Martine by his informing baillie Burd of the indignity and craving that baillie Gillespy might be secured therefore, and baillie Burds imprisoning him till he answered therefore, were neither of them wrong steps of procedure [and resolved to defeud them if they were prosecuted therefor]. Thereafter the magistrats and councill having considered the forsaid complaint and probation adduced thereon, with the said baillie Gillespie his misdemanour in face of councill by saying to baillie Martine he needed moe brains, and the said baillie Gillespie his judicial Process, Baillie Martine against Baillie Patrick Gillespy.

Process, Baillie Martine against Baillie Patrick Gillespy.

acknouledging that there was no need of taking any testimonies, for he acknowledged what Mr. Stivenson (a witness) had declared and that he could say more than any witness could say in that matter, they by a great plurality find it thereby sufficiently instructed that the said Patrick Gillespie has been guilty of ane indignity done by him to baillie Martine, a present magistrat, and therefor they fyne the said Patrick Gillespie in fyftie pound Scots for the indignity, and ordain him to acknouledge his fault thereby before the councill and to remain in ward till he so satisfie and performe.

1 September 1716.

36 lib. to Robert Stirling for guard keept at his house.

The magistrates and councill considering that for five or six moneths before, during, and after winter last, while his Majesties forces lay encamped and quartered in and about this burgh, the guard keept at the bridge of the same was partly held or keept in the dwelling house of Robert Stirling, dyster in the said burgh, at least the officers of said guard still tarryed therein, whereby his house was wholly taken up and he and his family deprived of any advantage they might have made thereof, in consideration and on account whereof they appoint the vice town treasurer of the said burgh to pay to the said Robert Stirling thirty six pound Scots.

Furnishing horses to the prisoners.

Appoints the said vice treasurer to provide sixteen sadle horses and four baggage horses against Munday nixt, the third currant, for transporting some of the prisoners in Stirling castle from this burgh to Killsyth, and to pay for the saids saddle and baggage horses for the space or length forsaid.

10 September 1716.

Furnishing medecines to the poor who are sick.

The councill considering the present callamity of this place by the great sickness therein, and that severall of the poorer sort of the inhabitants suffer exceedingly thereby through want of means to obtain propper remeadies for their malladies, and that the phisicians in this burgh have freely offered their service gratis to such if there were any way laid down for furnishing of medcines therefore, and for using the means for preventing the further grouth of the present raging sickness in this burgh, the saids magistrates and councill recomend to the elders of the kirk session to take up ane exact list of the sick persones in their severall quarters who have not means of their own to procure propper medecines for their recovery, and to lay the said list before the councill, and appoints baillie Chrystie, chyrurgeon, to furnish what medecines the phisicians shall prescribe or direct from time to time to be given to the said poorer sort, till it please God of his infinite mercy and by his blessing the means to putt a stop to the present sickness; and the councill declare they will pay the said baillie Christy the equall half of the ordinar rates of what medecines beis so furnished by him; and recomend to the minister and elders of the kirk session of this burgh to appoint payment to the said baillie Christy of the other half thereof.

Furnishing medecines to the poor who are sick.

The council considering the extraordinar pains and trouble which James Nicoll, town clerk, has been at and putt to since Michaelmass last, on publick accounts of this burgh and relating to the common concerns thereof during the late troubles, in writing frequently missives, orders, and others for this burgh in relation thereto, and likewayes in the severall procedures of this burgh anent the calling of Mr. Willeson, they allow him sixty pound Scots and his servants nine pound for their said extraordinar pains.

Allowances to the clerk and his servants.

15 September 1716.

The magistrats and council considering the extraordinar quantity of malt that was consumed in this burgh and obliged to be laboured by the farmer of the towns milns thereof since Martinmas last, occasioned through the great number of forces that lay quartered in this burgh during the late troubles, and likewise that by reason of the excessive frost for severall months after the beginning of November last and long and vehement drowth that succeeded the same, there was little or no water for serving the towns milns, whereby Alexander Burd, baillie, present farmer thereof, was necessitat for serving the burgh to send the most part of the malt consumed therein said space to the kersemilns of Polmais to be laboured thereat, and to pay considerably therefore, besides his expense of horses and servants to and from the saids milns therewith, whereby the said baillie Burd was putt to most considerable charge and great trouble and farder considering that by reason of the forsaid storm and succeeding drowth, and that the oats that used to be laboured at the towns milns were in great measure bought up for service of the horses in the army, whereby the said farmer was deprived of his multur thereof, so that he made not one peck of multur meall since Martinmass last, albeit in former years the farmer used to make sixteen or eighteen bolls yearly thereof; and in like manner taking to their consideration the smallnes of the yearly allowance the said farmer has for service forsaid, and that at Martinmas last he offered to resign and quite the service of the saids milns to the said council, and would have done the same had they not promised he should be no looser by the current years service, and that upon the faith thereof he continued to serve the saids milns and is to continue so to do till Martinmas nixt; therefore, and in consideration of his great loss and extream trouble since Martinmas last by reasons and in the service forsaid, the saids magistrats and council allow the said baillie Burd twenty pound starling attour his former yearly sallary or wages for serving the saids milns since Martinmas last to Martinmas nixt of extraordinar, and appoint the dean of gild and conveener to pay the same to him out of the converted multur; but declares this present act to be no preparative for herafter.

£20 starling to baillie Burd for extraordinar service of the milns.

£20 starling to baillie Burd for extra-ordinar service of the milns.

Act approving severall accompts.

Approves of fourty shillings sterling payed by the late thesaurer to John Letham, smith, for smith work done by him to the bridge in October and November last per particular accompt and receipt thereon, as also approves of another particular accompt of two hundered and fifteen pound eight shilling ten pennies Scots payed out by the late thesaurer to the towns men who went and kept guard at the castle of Down and otherways for the publick use of the burgh in manner therin sett down.

Act for 300 merks to the quarter-master.

The council considering the great and extraordinar trouble, pains, and fatigue which John Lowry, quartermaster of the said burgh, has been putt to and underwent in quartering the great number of forces that came to and were quartered in this burgh during the late troubles, which took up his whole time and deprived him of following any other business, therefore the saids magistrats and council do hereby grant and allow to the said John Lowry three hundred merks for his service as quartermaster forsaid from Michaelmas last to Michaelmas nixt.

Quartering Duke of Argylls aid de camps.

Approves of fifteen pound Scots payed by the late thesaurer to James Russal, late baillie, for quartering of Major Cathcart, ane of the Duke of Argylls aid de camps, for five weeks in winter last at the magistrats desire and upon their promise to satisfy therefore; as also allows to Hary Christy, baillie, seventy two pound Scots for his furnishing Major Stuart, another of the said Dukes aid de camps with two rooms, bed, coall and candle, for the space of twenty weeks, before and during winter last, which the magistrats desired and promised to satisfy for.

Approves of ane particular accompt of sixty one pound twelve shilling Scots payed out by John Muirhead, late town thesaurer, at the treat given to the Duke of Argyll, and otherways in manner therin sett down. Treat to duke of Argyll.

Approves of a particular accompt of five pound two shilling Scots due to William Spittal, merchant, for raisens and almonds gott from him at the treat given the Duke of Montrose in August last, and appoints the vice thesaurer to pay the same. Treat to duke of Montross.

30th October 1716.

The council having considered the supplication given in to them by John Skelly, taxman of the meall mercat since Martinmas last, representing the loss he sustained as taxman forsaid by the forces quartered in the place in winter last and part of the spring, their taking up the meall mercat wholly for the space of four months or thereby for use of their picket guard, horses, and otherways, wherby the petitioner was deprived of a great part of the dues and benefit of the said meall mercat space forsaid which he would have made had he gott the use and benefit thereof as formerly, they find that by the reasons represented (which consist with their knowledge), occasioned through the publick calamity by the late rebellion, the petitioner was ane looser, and therefore allow him three score pound Scots in liew and full of his loss and expenses. £60 quitt of tack duty of meall mercat.

10 November 1716.

Appoints baillie Patrick Gillespie, who is going for Edinburgh nixt week, to buy ane steel miln for grinding of malt for service of this burgh and deliver the same to the town treasurer, who is to satisfy him what he shall pay therefore and the expense of bringing home thereof. Buying a steel miln.

Approves of ane accompt of work done by David and James Napiers, measons, and their borrowmen, in repairing the holes made in the tolbooth by the prisoners, extending to four pound six shilling eight pennies. Repairs on tolbooth.

22 December 1716.

The magistrats and town councill considering the vaccancy of the second minister of this burgh by the decease of the reverend Mr. Robert M'Caulay, their late worthy pastor, and that it is absolutly necessar the samen should be speedily supplyed, and being unanimously inclined to call the reverend Call to Mr. Woodrow.

Call to Mr. Woodrow.

Mr. Robert Woodrow, minister of the gospell at Eastwood, to supply the said vacancy, they appoint Alexander Burd, dean of gild, [and three others], to correspond with the first minister and members of the kirk session of the samen, and take their sentiments thereon and report to the councill next dyet.[1]

10 January 1717.

Repair of Marrs house.

Approves of ane particular accompt of fifty one pound Scots due to James Watson, merchant, for sixty dealls and some trees furnished by him for behove of the burgh for repairing of Marrs house to lodge the souldiers, upon provost Erskins missive.

Lending towns charter to defend against Craigforth.

Appoints the dean of gild and conveener to give out to James Paterson, wryter in Sterling, the towns charter de novodamus and seasin thereon, and bond or obligation by my Lord Elphinston to this burgh in relation to their fishing on the water of Forth, for defence of Craigforths criminal process against James and John Patersons, portioners of Corntoun, fishers of ane of the towns fishing cobles.

31 January 1717.

Burgess dues quit; rebellion.

Receives and admits William Wilson, indweller in the said burgh, to the liberty and freedom of ane nighbour and burges thereof, and his entry being twenty four pound Scots they unanimously quite the samen in respect of the loss of his horse, which was lost and ordered out by the magistrats for his Majesties service during the late rebellion.

Writing to Craigforth anent the fishing.

The council having under their consideration ane letter written to them by the provost, Tillibody their advocat, and Badindalloch their agent, they, for preventing of any farder trouble or debate in the affair betwixt the laird of Craigforth and this burgh in relation to their respective interests of fishing upon the water of Forth, authorize and impower the magistrats to write to Craigforth and require his answer if he adheres to the comuning and concert past betwixt him and the provost thereanent, and signify the same by writ under his hand conform to the copie therof now shown to the council, and to report his answer thereanent to the council nixt dyet therof that they may take measures according therto and as beis proper in the affair.

[1] From subsequent minutes it is found that all parties interested "cordially consented" to a call being given to Mr. Woodrow. The usual procedure for carrying this into effect followed; but the well-known pastor of Eastwood could not be induced to leave his charge.

13 April 1717.

Appoints ane fisher court of this burgh to be held on the north side of the water of Forth at the cruives of Craigforth on Tuesday nixt come eight dayes, the twenty third current by eleven aclock foirnoon. Fisher court.

4 May 1717.

The magistrats and council of the said burgh being conveened, and taking to their serious consideration the indignity and abuse offered and done to some of the present magistrats and others of the burgesses and inhabitants of this burgh last night by some of the officers of colonell Montagues regiment, and the growndless disturbance which they occasioned by beating ane alarm after the tatoe had been beat, whereby severals of the inhabitants were frighted and the place putt in great disorder and confusion, they judge it proper that on the above and other grownds the magistrats apply to the justices of peace of the shire, that they may be pleased to appoint a dyet for receiving affidavits upon the matters of fact, to the effect the same may be laid before his excellence lieutenant general Carpenter, that proper satisfaction may be made and such orders given as his excellence shall think fitt for preventing such trouble for the future. Abuse committed upon magistrats by officers of Montagues regiment.

29 May 1717.

Receive and admit Robert Moir, sadler, to the liberty and freedom of a nighbour and burges of the said burgh, and in regaird of the great want of ane sufficient tradesman at present of the forsaid imploy therin, for the said intrant his encouragement quite him his entry payable to the said burgh, being twelve pound Scots. A sadler admitted burgess gratis.

22 July 1717.

The councill considering the supplication given in to them by William Ferrier, horse hyrer, burges of this burgh, anent ane horse furnished by him about two years since by order of some of the then magistrates to ane officer of Hamiltouns regiment that was then going for Inverlochie, and that the said horse was drowned in a loch going thither, and that the petitioner as yet had never any reparation for said loss, they allow him twenty four pound Scots in lieu of the same, and of all others he might any wayes ask or pretend to from this burgh on account forsaid or for any other such or like causes, hyres, or others, preceding this date. £24 to a horse hyrer in full of all proceedings.

28 August 1717.

Accompts in setting up the cockstool.

Approves of the particular accompts following, viz., of twelve pound eight shilling Scots payed out by Michael Downie, late vice town treasurer, to David Fergusson, wright, for workmanship and scaffolding to the cockstooll, setting it up, and for some dealls, single trees, and naills thereto, per said accompt and receipt theron; and of three pound two shilling paid by said late vice treasurer to John Bell, hammerman, for iron work to the said cockstooll and otherwayes on publict accompt, per particular accompt and receipt; and allows to John Mathieson ten pound Scots of his accompt of eleven pound sixteen shilling charged for materialls and pains in culloring the said cockstooll.

14 September 1717.

Accompts at circuit and on Kings birthday.

The councill approves of a particular accompt of the expence of the treat given to the lords of justiciary at their circuit in this burgh in May last, extending to 45 pound 10 shilling Scots; and of another particular accompt of the publick expence of this burgh at the solemnity of his Majesties birth day, twenty eighth May last, extending to 101 pound 6 shilling Scots.

16 September 1717.

£4 Scots to Mrs Littlejohn for use of stable.

The councill having considered the petition given in to them by Janet Anderson, relict of John Littlejohn, late conveener, they find that during the late troubles her stable was taken from her by some of the magistrates or others in authority, and given to accomodate horses belonging to one of the officers of the army, and detained for a considerable time to her loss and prejudice, and therfore allow her four pound Scots in full thereof.

5 October 1717.

Voluntar collection for propagating the christian knowledge.

The magistrats and toune councill of the said burgh being conveined, and taking to their serious consideration that the inhabitants of this burgh have not hitherto given in any voluntar contribution for the use of the publick fund allowed to be collected for propogating the christian knowledge in the more remote partes of this kingdome, they appoint ane voluntar collection from the inhabitants of this burgh towards advancing the said pious designe to be taken upon any of the dayes of the ensuing week, and recommends to the magistrats, with any they shall thinke fitte to chuse, to goe through their severall quarters and collect to the end forsaid upon any of the dayes of the nixt week, and also recommends to Mr. Brisbane, minister, to make intimation thereof from the pulpit tomorrow after the foirnoons sermon.

Voluntar collection for propagating the christian knowledge.

4 November 1717.

James Nicoll, toune clerk, gave in to the toun councill ane principall disposition be the earle of Mar to the provost, baillies, etc., of Sterling, of the patronadge of the kirk thereof, subscrybed the third of December j^{m}vj^{c} seventy and seven years, which after reading in councill was delivered up in face thereof to David Gillespie, present dean of gild, to be putt up by him and the conveiner in the boal or ambrie in the old councill house.

Delivery of disposition of the patronadge.

22 April 1718.

The dean of gild represented that the deacon of the glovers, for himself and in the names of the remanent members of the said trade, having represented to the gildrie that the cordiners iucroatched upon the joint priviledge of the gildrie and glovers by buying of calf skinns within this burgh contrair to acts of councill, acts and agreement of the conveener and deacons, and ane act of gildrie and ratification thereof by the conveiner and deacons new and old in anno j^{m}vj^{c} and nyntie, and that the present conveiner and some of his deacons had lately past ane act of their court allowing the cordiners so to doe notwithstanding of their former acts, and craved the gildrie might take effectual methods for preventing the lyke incroatchments for the future, the gildrie had recommended to the dean of gild to lay the same before the toune councill that they might take effectual methods for quelling the heats arisen therefrom, punishing the incroatchers on the gildrie and glovers joint priviledge in the forsaid matter, and preventing further incroatchments of the lyke nature in tyme coming; and the magistrats and toune councill having heard the glovers act and approbation or ratification in anno j^{m}vj^{c} and nyntie be the then conveener and deacons read, and seen several other acts in favours of the glovers in publick councill, and considered the same with the late act of the conveiner court to the contrair, they find for what produced, and unlesse the cordiners instruct ane farder and better right than the said late act of the conveiner court in their favours, they have no priviledge, libertie, or right to buy calf skinns within this burgh, but that the same is the joint and propper right and priviledge of the gild brethren and glovers, and therefor prohibit and discharge

Discharging cordiners from buying calf skinns, etc.

Discharging cordiners from buying calf skinns, etc.

the cordiners within this burgh and ilke one of them to buy any calf skinns therein in tyme coming till they document a better right for doing thereof, and that under the pain of ten pound Scots to be forfeit and payed be ilke persone contraveening, toties quoties, attoure being otherwayes punished as the councill shall think fitte for contempt of their authoritie.

Cordiners and fleshers to produce their rights for exactions from unfriemen.

Appoints the deacon of the cordiners to produce and lay before the toun councill any rights they have for exacting the gate pennie and fourteen shilling Scots from each countrie cordiner for their being allowed to buy cows hydes in the mercat, and lykewayes the deacon of the fleshers to produce and lay before the councill any rights they have for exacting box money from the countrie fleshers, and that against Thursday nixt at ten aclock foirnoon, to the effect the councill may know how far the saids trades have right or power so to exact.

14 June 1718.

Repairing church bell.

The councill appoints James Wallace, town treasurer, to give to William Smith and Colline M'Lowry, hammermen, fourty pound Scots for their pains and expences by themselves and others they imployed in mounting and dismounting one of the church bells, boring thereof, and mounting of the tongue.

2 August 1718.

Mrs. Adison not to bake seed or plumb cakes for sale.

The councill considering that the priviledge of the baxters of this burgh has been incroached on by Mrs. Adison by baking seed and plumb cakes to funeralls and other occasions, therefor they prohibit and discharge her and all others within this burgh to bake any seed or plumb cakes for sale to any in this burgh or the countrie, except the baxters within this burgh, in any tyme coming, with certification to Mrs. Adison if she contravein she shall from thencefurth loose her sallarie allowed her by this burgh for keeping of ane school therein for the education of youth.

Robert Russall appointed cornet.

Thereafter the dean of gild nominat Robert Russall, second son to James Russall, elder, merchand, to ryde the fair as cornet, in regaird John Finlaysone is residing at Edinburgh.

23 August 1718.

The provost, baillies, and town councill of the said burgh being conveened, it was represented to them by the reverend Mr. Birsbain and Mr. Muir, ministers, that it had been laid by severalls of the inhabitants before the kirk session that the inhabitants humblie judged their young children, as weell boyes as girles, were at extream loss as to their being taught English by reason of the old age of Andrew Matson, Scots doctor, and that the girles cannot be conveniently sent to the grammer school to learn their English, whereby they are for the most part foundered therein, and that the session had appointed the saids ministers and some of the elders to lay the same before the councill that they may have the same under their serious consideration and fall upon some expedient way for the more convenient and effectuall instructing and learning the youth, both boyes and girles, in reading English. The councill recomend to the provost, baillies, dean of gild, and conveener, to meet with the ministers and Mr. Thomas Darline, master of the grammer schooll, and consider what will be the most proper way for effectuating so good a design, and disjoining the Scots class from the grammer schooll with as litle prejudice to Mr. Darline, schoolmaster, as possible with respect to his dues out of the Scots class, and to cause trye out for a sufficient and fitt person for teaching English and to make report next councill day. Overture and recomendation anent the Scots class.

28 August 1718.

The provost, baillies, and town councill of the said burgh, appoint James Wallace, town treasurer, to write to Edinburgh for two trumpiters to sound before the parade at the riding of the next fair, and to pay the said trumpiters therfore as usuall. Trumpiters to the riding fair.

1 September 1718.

The provost, baillies, and town councill of the said burgh, being conveened for treating of the common concerns thereof, and having under their serious consideration ane petition formerly given in to them by William Maiben and William Mitchell, barbers and pirrieweg makers, merchands and burgesses of the said burgh, for themselves and in name and behalf of the remanent barbers and pirrieweg makers therin, which had been presented and read in councill upon the 22nd of August last, and maketh mention that where albeit the town councill by their act the eighteen day of June Act incorporating the barbers.

Act incorporating the barbers.

$j^m vj^c$ and ninty eight years, statute and ordained that no person living within this burgh, who is not entered burges, presume or take upon hand in any time thereafter to practise or make use of the said art of barbarizing or pieriewig making under the penalty of twenty pound Scots money, toties quoties, yet the samen no wayes authorizes the petitioners to oblidge any intrant burges who barbarizes or makes wigs to enter with the petitioners or give them any acknowledgment; and seing they are willing if indulged by your worships to imbody or incorporat themselves in a society of barbers, and for the better support of their poor and sufficiency of their work to oblidge each burges who shall hereafter enter and use the foresaid art or trade to enter with the said society of barbers and pay in [blank] Scots money of entry money to them, and to appoint one of their number as overseer for manadging their concerns and taking care of the sufficiency of their work, and other necessar members, if authorized thereto by your worships; and therefore craving your worships might take the premisses to your serious consideration and allow your petitioners to reimbodie or incorporate themselves, and annually to elect ane of their number as their overseer to take care of their publick concerns and inspect the sufficiency of their work, and to appoint other requisite members, and to statute that any person hereafter entering burges and practizing the foresaid art or trade shall be obliged to pay in to the said society of barbers [blank] money foresaid of entrie money. The saids provost, baillies, and town councill, after mature deliberation, hereby not only ratify and approve of the above former act of councill in the haill heads, articles, and clauses thereof, made in favours of the barbers within this burgh, but also hereby grant and allow liberty and priviledge to the barbers, pieriwig makers therin, who are burgesses, to imbody or incorporate themselves in ane tollerate society or incorporation by their allowance and under their authority, granting and giving to them full power annually to elect one of their number as overseer of their society, who is hereby authorized to take care of their whole publick concerns with consent of the other members of said society or plurality of them as they shall see cause and find just, and more particularly to inspect the sufficiency of the work of the members of said society, and with concurrance of any of the magistrats for the time to punish for insufficiency of work as the magistrats shall direct and appoint, and to appoint any clerk, boxmaster, and officer of their society, as the members thereof be

10 September 1719.

Rescinding former act for bnilding a tympan.

The councill reconsidering their act of the 29th of August last for building a tympan on the foirfront of the towns house, they find the same would prejudge the roof, and therefore rescind the foresaid act and discharge the building of ane tympan, and appoint the roof when the stone work is finished to be putt on in a plain way without flankers which the tympan would occasion.

12 September 1719.

Claytons officers burges; fire at horsemiln.

Approves of a particular accompt payed out by the town treasurer in making the officers of Claytons regiment burgesses in the councill house, extending to 46 pound 9 shilling; and of another payed out by him to souldiers and others for their pains in indeavouring to extinguish the fire at the horsemiln and Castle Wynd, extending to 16 pound 16 shilling Scots.

Room for sick soulders.

The councill considering that when souldiers quartered in this place turn sick or deseased the samen is uneasie and troublesome to the families where they are quartered, therefore the councill appoint their treasurer to take ane convenient room for lodging any sick or deseased souldiers that beis quartered in this place, and that for a year to come at as easie a rent as possible, that the inhabitants be not troubled with sick or deseased souldiers lying in their families.

10 October 1719.

Process and act, Patrick Stivensone.

It being represented and complained of the councill be Christopher Russall, deacon conveener of the said burgh, for himself and others of the councill, that on the twenty third of September last Patrick Stivenson, elder, merchant in this burgh, scandalized and abused the said conveener and severall others of the then, and some of them yet present councillers, by calling them damned or confounded Jacobit rascalls or devils, and craved he might be fyned and otherwayes punished therefor; and the said Patrick being cited, called, and compearing personally, after the complaint was read over to him and he examined thereon, he judicially acknouledged that in his drink he vented some such expressions or the lyke, which he does not particularly remember, and that he was sorrie and came in the councills will therefor, and in testimonie thereof he and the preses have subscryved thir presents. Which being considered by the councill, they ordain the said Patrick Stivenson judicially, in face of councill, to acknouledge he was in the wrong in so venting and expressing himself, and to crave pardone therefor, and to enact himself not to be guilty of the lyke towards the councill present or to come in tyme coming, under the pain of ane hundered pound Scots to be payed by him to the treasurer in case of contravention, attoure being otherwayes punished according to law therefor.

Process and sentence against Murdoch for breaking prison.

Anent the representation and complaint given in to the magistrats and council by Archibald M'Lechrist, late deacon of the weavers of this burgh, and Charles Ross, procurator fiscall thereof, for his interest, against James Murdoch, present deacon of the glovers of said burgh, for going out of prison upon Friday last, the 30th June last, after he had been incarcerat in the tolbooth by the magistrats order till he gave publick satisfaction in the terms of a sentence before the commissar court, craving that he might be punished therefore as being contrair to his burgour oath, and that by being declared no burges and incapable of bearing publick poast or charge in this burgh at any time hereafter; the defender being summoned, called, and compearing personally, judicially acknowledged that, after he had been incarcerat as above, he, without liberty of any of the magistrats, time forsaid, late at night, went out of the tolbooth to his own house to gett a coad and a drink of water, but returned quickly to the prison; and likewise judicially acknowledged that he had formerly come out of prison without the authority or liberty of any magistrat after he had been incarcerat on a warrand for debt at the instance of William Paterson, elder, merchant; and came in the magistrats and councils will therefor. Which being considered by the magistrats and council, they find the complaint acknowledged and the defender therby guilty of breaking of the prison two severall times, and that by so doing he has forfeit his right and priviledge as a burges, and therfore declare his admission as burges of this burgh null, and the said James Murdoch incapable of bearing any public charge or poast therin at any time hereafter, and ordain him to be remitted back and secured in closs prison till he give publick satisfaction in terms of the foresaid sentence on account wherof he was last incarcerat.

Process and sentence against Murdoch for breaking prison.

11 July, 1721.

The councill considering that before entering of Andrew Shedden, hammerman and ferrier, burgess, it was resolved his entrie as burgess should be quitt in regaird of his usefullnesse as horse ferrier in this place, they quitt his entrie being twelve pound Scots.

Quitting a horse ferrier's entrie.

The council nominat and appoint John Din, hammerman, to be town drummer of the said burgh during the councils pleasure, and appoint William Maiben, treasurer, to furnish him with a suitt of drummers cloaths bearing the touns livery as usuall, but declare the said drummer is to have no sallary but only payments for beatting of banks, proclamations, or the like, in the usuall manner.

Appointing tonn drummer.

with the carriage thereof and drink money, extending to £13 12 s. 4 d. starling, and allows the said treasurer to discharge himself therewith.

New cushen made of foot mantle; cover to carpet.

The council considering that the cushen designed for the provost of this burgh to sitt on in the kirk is now very old and insufficient, and that there is now little use for the touns foot mantle, they appoint William Maiben, treasurer, to cause make ane cushen of the said foot mantle, and likewise to cause make ane cloath or slip to cover the carpet in the magistrates loft.

James Nicoll toun clerk during life; seasine register.

The council having called for and revised the council books and registers of this burgh, and finding the same exactly filled up and signed, they to encourage James Nicoll, toun clerk of this burgh, to continue in his diligence and faithfullness, nemine contradicente, nominate and elect him toun clerk of this burgh ad vitam aut culpam, and he being present gave his oath de fideli accordingly. And appoint that in all time coming the registers of seasines and others belonging to this burgh be for hereafter numbered on the pages thereof, and each tenth page thereof signed by the preses of council for the time.

5 August, 1721.

Leather buckets and ladders.

The magistrats and toun council considering that severall of the touns leather buckets used in case of accidents by fire are amissing, and that notwithstanding of ane former act of council ladders have not as yet been made which are necessar on such occasions, therefore they appoint William Maiben, toun treasurer, to cause make so many leather buckets for the end forsaid as he finds necessar, and likewise to cause make two sufficient ladders for said use; and recomends to the gildry and seven incorporat trades to cause make four sufficient ladders for the end forsaid, viz., the gildry two and the trades two.

21 August, 1721.

Entry money of a currier quitt.

Receives and admits Patrick Morisone, currier in St. Ninians, to the liberty and freedome of ane neighbour and burgess of this burgh; and they quitt him his entry, being twelve pound Scots, in respect he is to come and live in this burgh, and that there is no other currier of leather therein, and that his following said employment within the same will be for the advantage of the cordners therein.

12 September, 1721.

Salmon given to duke of Argyle.

The council appoint William Maiben, toun treasurer, to give to David Willisone, burges of this burgh, four pound sixteen shillings Scotts for a large salmond he furnished for publick use of the burgh in December j^{m}vij^{c} and fifteen, which was given in complement to his grace the Duke of Argyle. Salmon given to duke of Argyle.

4 November, 1721.

The provost, baillies, and toun council of the said burgh, considering that the toun has no carpet for the council table, they therefore appoint William Maiben, toun treasurer, to buy ane carpet for laying upon the said table, and likewise to cause buff the magistrats and councillours seatts in the church, and to buy ane new two armed chair of Rushy lether for the provost sitting on in the church. Carpet to council table; repairing church seatts.

17 November, 1721.

The provost laid before the council a letter from the provost of Perth to the magistrats of this burgh craving the council might give their concurrance in addressing the honourable House of Commons for taking off the dutie that is laid upon Scotts linnen that is stamped, printed, or stained in Great Brittain, as being a most considerable branch of the trade of this kingdom, with ane coppy of the address by the toun council of Perth that was signed by their provost on account theirof in their names, which being read in council the vote was stated—address as desired with advice of knowing men in the place with a commitie of the council, or delay the same till farder thought on,—and it was carried delay till a commitie of the council and some knowing persons in the place be appointed by the council for considering of the said affair. Thereafter the council recomend to the provost, baillies, dean of gild, conveener, and treasurer, with Andrew Wright, Andrew M'Lewham and James Dawson, merchant councellours, and Robert Forrest, deacon of the weavers, trades councellour, to meett to morrow at nine aclock forenoon at the toun councilhouse, consider of said matter, call for any knowing merchantis in the place they shall think fitt and take their advice therein, and prepare their thoughts thereon to be reported to the council next dyet theirof. Addressing House of Commons for taking dutie off stampt linnen.

18 January, 1722.

There was ane act of the convention of royall burrows concerning the plague, past the thirteenth day of December last, presented and read in council, which the council appointed to be recorded in the principall council book, and which was accordingly done.[1] Act of convention concerning the plague.

[1] The act referred to is printed in the Records of Convention, vol. V., pp. 299-301.

Lists of unentered persons and poor.

The council recomends to the magistrats and dean of gild to go through the four quarters of the burgh, each of the three baillies and dean of gild calling for any merchants and trades councillours he shall think fitt, and to take up ane exact list of the whole people living in their respective quarters that are not entered burgesses, that they may be charged to enter or to remove furth of the burgh conform to former acts of council; and likewise to take up lists of the poor belonging to the burgh in the severall quarters.

Discharging giving and taking of letters bodles.

The council being informed that some person or persons within this burgh doe disperse considerable quantities of Dutch doitts or letters bodles which are not current coin, to the great prejudice of the place and commerce thairof, therefore they appoint ane bank to be putt through this burgh discharging such practices for the future, and all persons from giving or receiving any such letters bodles in payments, as they will be answerable upon their highest penalty.

27 January, 1722.

English doctors in the Grammar school.

The provost, baillies, and toun council of the said burgh being conveened, there was produced and read over to them ane extract of ane act of the presbytery of Sterling of the twentieth of December last declaring their satisfaction that Mr. Magnis Walker, schoolmaster in Drummond, be installed to be doctor in the grammar school of this burgh for teaching English, writting, and arithmetick therein: which being considered by the council they hereby install the said Mr. Walker in the foresaid station from and after the feast and term of Candlemass nixt to come, during the council present and to come their pleasure, and grant and allow to him ane hundred pound Scotts of salary yearly during his being continued in said station.

5 May, 1722.

Money due for coall and candle furnished to guards.

The provost, baillies, and toun council of the said burgh being conveened, there was ane abstract of the accompt of coal and candle furnished by this burgh to the guards kept by the honourable Collonel Claytons regiment theirin from the sixth of June last 1721 to the fifth of May 1722, amounting to £22 6s. 8d. sterling, by provost Johnstone, and it was moved by severalls of the council that, in order to be a precedent for the future as to the forces that beis quartered in this burgh, the provost should use all possible endeavours to recover payment of said accompt.

19 June, 1722.

It was overtured by severalls of the council that the first seat in the magistrats old loft, and second seats thereof to the bught of the said second seats, be in all time coming reserved for the accomodatione of the old magistrats and of strangers of distinctione or respect; and it was also overtured by the dean of gild that both the first and second seats in said loft be wholy and intirely reserved to the end and purpose foresaid. The council continue the consideratione of both overtures till their next dyet.

Anent seats in the magistrates old loft.

6 October, 1722.

The magistrats and council appoint Andrew Wright, toun treasurer, to give twenty four pound Scotts for helping to defray the expence of cutting James Sympson, son to Robert Sympson, of the stone, which is to be done this day.

Cutting of the stone.

22 December, 1722.

The council considering the loss that Thomas Glen, taxman of the meall mercate, was at for about a fourtnight in August last, when severalls of the horses of Stairs dragoons stood in the meall mercate before they were encampt, they allow the said Thomas twelve pound Scots in full recompence of said loss.

12 £ to taxman of meall mercate.

19 February, 1723.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill, treating of the common concerns of the said burgh, and having formerly and now had under their serious consideration ane representation given in to them the twenty eight day of January last, then and at dyets thereof thereafter read in publick councill, by James Grahame and Alexander Chalmers, neighbours, burgesses of the said burgh, present deacons of the tolerate society or incorporation of workmen, hauxters, carriers, horsehyrers, and other dargsmen of such employs or occupations therein, commonly called the omnigatherum, for themselves and in name of the remanent members of the said indulgent society, mentioning that where albeit the saids representants and severall others of their incorporation have been from time to time charged by the magistrats authority to enter burgesses of this burgh, yet within some years past severall persons have followed the saids employs or handylabours as residenters therein without entering burgesses, to the manifest hurt and prejudice of the members of omnigatherum, since those of that society were actually entered are able to serve the burgh and inhabitants in such cases, and that these not entered who practised the same thereby deprive such as are entered members of the said incorporation of their bread in so far, and reap the advantage thereof without paying of any satisfaction for any such liberty; and furder shewing that albeit the representants and others members of the omnigatherum in their stations and capacity are frequently called to serve the government and burgh on all occasions, if not more than any others, especially in time of disturbance in the nation, removeall of forces quartered in the place or coming of forces transiently thereto in carrying their baggage therefrom, yet hitherto there hes been no act or constitution granted or appointed by the saids magistrats and councill or their predecessors, whereby any practising any handycraft or employ used and followed by any of the omnigatherum are oblidged to enter with the said society after their being entered with the burgh, and to pay to the omnigatherum for their entry therewith as the councill shall appoint, notwithstanding that other tolerate incorporations have some indulgence allowed them that way, whereby it might easily appear that the omnigatherums inability to serve the touns demands on publick occasions proceeded not from their unwillingness, but from their above circumscrived straitning circumstances in their present case; and therefore humbly craving that their honours might be pleased, in consideration of the premisses, not only to take ane effectuall method to suppress such as are not entered with the burgh and are able to enter therewith from and discharge their following or practising any handy labour or the like work or occupation used by them therein till they actually enter burgesses, under such pains, penalties, and certifications as their honours shall think fitt; but also, in regaird the omnigatherum have been ane allowed incorporation as above past memory of man, and most ready to serve in the greatest extremities, to ratify, renew, and approve of all former grants or allowances in their favours with respect to their said incorporation and priviledges thereof, and of new to give, grant, and confirm the same to them, allowing the said incorporation and their successors, by their deacons or representatives, to charge such as beis entered burgesses and use hyreing of horses, carting, threshing, hauxtering, or other employs of the like kind, and beis not entered with any other of the incorporations of this burgh, to enter with the omnigatherum in such time after the charge to be given them by their officer for that effect, and under such prohibition, penalty, and certification as their honours shall think fitt. The saids provost, baillies, and toun councill, after mature deliberation, hereby statute and enact that no person or persons for present residenters within this burgh, or who hereafter shall happen to be indwellers therein, and who are entered or beis judged capable by the toun council present or to come to be admitted burgesses and enter with the burgh and beis not entered with any other of the trades or incorporations therein, shall be allowed or suffered to use, follow, or practise hyring of horses, driving of carts, carrying of merchant goods, selling of hauxter ware, keeping of milk cows, fatning of cows for slaughter, or the like employs, but are hereby discharged therefrom under the pain of four pounds Scots money to be forfeit and payed by ilk ane of them for ilk contravention in manner forsaid ay and whyle they enter with the said omnigatherum in manner after prescrived; and declare that any for present practising as aforsaid and are not entered with the burgh, and beis deemed proper by the toun councill to be receaved and admitted as burgesses by them, shall be oblidged upon information thereof from the omnigatherum within the space of a month thereafter to enter burgesses or be ordered to remove furth of this burgh and territories thereof. And furder, the saids provost, baillies, and toun councill, as representing the community of the said burgh, by this their act and grant, for certain reasonable considerations not only ratify and approve of all former grants and indulgences by the magistrats and toun councill of this burgh in favours of the said omnigatherum and priviledges thereby accruing to them, but also of new grant, allow, and confirm, liberty and priviledge to the members of the said omnigatherum who are entered burgesses to embody or incorporate themselves in ane tolerate society or incorporation of omnigatherum by the saids magistrats and councill their allowance and under their authority, hereby giving and granting to the said omnigatherum full power annually to elect two of their number as deacons of their society, who are hereby authorized to take care of their whole publick concerns with consent of the other members of said society or plurality of them as they shall see cause and find reasonable, and to appoint ane clerk, boxmasters, and officers ane or moe, of their society as the members thereof by unanimous consent or majority of votes shall from time to time think fitt to elect and appoint; and likewise by their officer, in the space of six months after the entry of any as burges who beis not a member of any of the other trades or incorporations, to cause charge such to enter with the omnigatherum within the space of fifteen dayes after the charge by their officer, under the pain of fourty shilling money forsaid to be paid in by such to their box in case of failyie, attour being liable for the entry money in manner after exprest; and which penalty is allowed to be exacted and uplifted by the omnigatherum, the concurrance of one of the magistrats being alwise asked and obtained thereto, and to do every other thing else lawfull and convenient for the right management of said society and its concerns, as freely in all respects as any other society tollerate by the magistrats and toun councill of this burgh have done or may by law do and exert in the like cases; declaring the same nevertheless upon application to be alwise subject to the cognisance of the magistrats and toun councill of this burgh present and to come as they shall find just and reasonable. And sicklike, the saids magistrats and toun councill hereby statute and ordain that any person hereafter entering burges and practising any of the forsaids employs, and who does not enter with any other of the trades or incorporations therein, shall be oblidged to pay into the box belonging to the said omnigatherum the sum of nine pound money forsaid for the use of their poor for his entring with them, unless the said society or tolerate incorporation shall hereafter think fitt to low the said entry, which they are hereby impowered to do as they shall find cause; and likewise to appoint the entry of the childeren of any of their members or of their sons in law, the same alwise not exceeding the fourth part of the entry money above appointed. Providing alwise that by this present grant the said society be oblidged to apply their entries and interests of their present stock and what arises therefrom amongst their poor for their support, and for defraying the expence of their other publick and necessar concerns so far as the same will extend to. And likewise that the said omnigatherum shall from time to time when required render ane accompt to the magistrates and toun councill present and to come of their common stock and entries and how the same are applied. Hereby declaring that the usuall number of the members of said omnigatherum shall be oblidged to go the yearly fairs, and do other publick services thereat and on all other necessar occasions to this burgh, when called thereto according to use and wont. And furder declaring that this present grant is only to continue during the provost, baillies, and toun councill of this burgh present and to come, their pleasure, and to be subject alwise to rescision, alteration, restriction, or innovation, as they shall find cause; with and under which speciall provision and declaration this present act and grant is made and past and no otherwise. And in testimony hereof the dean of gild, as preses of councill, has in their names subscrived this present act and grant, ane extract whereof signed by the toun clerk being hereby declared to be as sufficient to all intents and purposes as if this present were signed by the whole magistrates and toun councill; and the great seall of this burgh is hereby appointed to be appended to the extract hereof.

Grant in favours of the omnigatherum.

23 February, 1723.

It was represented to the council by Andrew M'Lequham, merchant, burges of the said burgh, taxman of the shoar maill and anchorage thereof, that of late there came up severall boats with goods to the shoar that went off without paying any anchorage, and particularly on Wednesdays night last, the twentieth currant, there came up two boatts from Airth with daills and trees to John Christie from one M'Apine, merchant in Airth, which after livering the goods were carried off by the sailers without payment of the anchorage, after application had been made Thursday last to baillie Galloway to give orders to ane officer to bring back some of the persons who had brought up the saids two last boats while these persons were in toun, or take ane poynd furth thereof till the anchorage was paid, the officer having ordered them to pay the anchorage, upon which they gott into the boats and thrust them off from the shoar, except one of the men who run away and followed and run a piece by land to gett aboard of one of the boats, and so went off without paying the anchorage, to the taxmans great prejudice, and which will no doubt continue to be so practised unless the council authorize their taxman summarly at their oun hand, when boats come to and anchor at this shoar, and the saillers or ouners refuse to pay their anchorage or absent themselves from their boats to avoid paying thereof, in said case to take a poynd out of the boats till payment of the anchorage. Which being considered by the magistrats and councill, they find it reasonable that such base practises so manifestly to the prejudice of the revenues of this burgh be prevented; therefore and for the more effectual doing thereof, they hereby authorize and impower the taxman of the said shoar maill and anchorage, present and to come, after boats come to and anchor at this shoar, and that the saillers or ouners refuse to pay their anchorage or absent themselves from their boats to evade paying theirof, in said case summarly at the taxmans own hand to take a poynd out of the boats, one or moe, till payment of the anchorage theirof, and to detain the same till payment theirof be made according to use and wont and the priviledges indulged in this burgh by their chartours and grants of the said shoar maill and anchorage and other publick revenues theirof.

13 April, 1723.

Giving back seats to kirk session.

The magistrats and council [renounce and] grant to the kirk session the seats in the body or area of the church not formerly allocate, to be sett and disposed of by the said kirk sessione for the use and behove of the poor thereof in all time hereafter; with this express condition and provisione alwise that the kirk sessione give and grant the two dasks [in the body of the church immediately bewest the entry or door to provost Napiers seat, consisting each of these two dasks of three seats or rooms,] to James Wallace and John Galloway, bailies, equally, for accomodations of themselves and families in the church during their interest or residence in this burgh, upon their paying a reasonable value therefore to the kirk session for the use of the poor, under the condition of these dasks being removed when the sacrament of the Lords supper beis dispensed in said church.

24 December, 1723.

March stones.

Recomend to the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener, to cause number the march stones belonging to this burgh, and to cause putt the figure of the number upon each of them that their number may be known, and to enquire what became of these march stones that were wanting.

22 February, 1724.

List of the poor.

The council recommend to the magistrats to goe through their respective quarters of the burgh and take up a list of the poor therein properly belonging thereto, and of the stranger poor at present therein, that such strangers may be ordered to depart furth thereof and be no further burdensome thereto; as also recomend to the saids magistrats to enquire about the proposals made some years agoe for the maintenance of the poor of this burgh, and consider what will be the properest method for rendering the same effectual.

2 June, 1724.

Transactions made with Mr. Brisbane.

The committee formerly appointed to treate with Mr. Brisbane anent his discharging the toun of their engagement by the agreement betwixt this burgh and him anent his locall stipend, and the towns assigning and retrocessing him to the said stipend from and after such term or time as they should agree to, and allowing him a resonable gratification in consideration of his quitting the said former bargain so burthensome to the burgh, made report that they had mett and communed with Mr. Brisbane theiranent, and had offered him one thousand merks Scots to discharge as above upon the touns assigning and retrocessing him for the cropt and year 1724 and in all time thereafter during his incumbency, and that the said Mr. Brisbane had cordally agreed thereto; which being considered by the council, they unanimously approve of the said report and authorize and impower the toun thesaurer for them and in their names to retrocess and assign Mr. Brisbane to his locall stipend for and after cropt and year 1724, upon Mr. Brisbanes delivering up and amply discharging the said agreement and fully exonering the burgh theirof quoad futurum, and likewayes of what payable by the said burgh by the forsaid agreement to the said minister in place of his locall stipend att and preceeding the term of Whitsunday last, and the presbitery of Sterling their approving theirof.

3 June, 1724.

Repairing of prison walls and discharging setting of cellar.

The provost, baillies, and town council, considering the insufficiency of the partition walls by reason of the thinness theirof of the severall prisons below the tolbooth, and that the other walls of saids prisons are likewise in some parts insufficient, and likewayes that the setting of one of the saids prisons to be a cellar to a private person has been the occasion of Robertsons escape, he having come out at the cellar door, do therefore appoint the partition and other walls of the saids prisons to be made sufficient by thickning theirof, or otherwayes as the magistrats shall direct, and recomend to the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener, to cause do the same with all convenient expedition, and to take what advice they shall think fitt theiranent for making the walls sufficient; and discharge the setting of any of the saids prisons to any private person for whatever occasion in any time hereafter; and ordain the foresaid cellar to be emptied of any liquors or others therein, and the key theirof to be delivered to the treasurer for the publick use and service of the burgh, and declare that there is no rent to be exacted for the said cellar since Whitsunday last.

John Ewing, maltman, burges of Sterling, one of the cautioners to the burgh for the diligence, fidelity, and care of Archibald Moir, jaylor of the tolbooth of the said burgh, compeared personally in council, and in regaird of John Robertson, prisoner, his escaping lately furth of prison, which appeared to be through the negligence of the said jaylor, he declared he would continue no longer engaged as above.

4 June, 1724.

Colin M'Lourie, jaylor.

The provost, baillies, and toun council, nominate and appoint Colin M'Lowrie, deacon of the hammermen, jaylor or keeper of the tolbooth of this burgh and prisons thereof, furth and from this date during the council present or to come their pleasure, and allow him the same weekly sallery or fiall of twenty four shilling Scots that Archibald Moir, former jaylor, had, and that besides the ordinar jaylor fialls in use to be paid by prisoners for debt or otherwise.

27 June, 1724.

Act declaring a burges ticket void.

The magistrats and toun council being conveened, baillie Gallaway represented to them that yesterday in the afternoon Margaret Clark, washer wife, having complained to him upon Francis Hunter, carver, a gratis burges of this burgh, for thirty eight shilling Scots the said Francis was resting her for washing and mending of his cloaths, and that the said baillie having caused conveen the said Francis before him he judicially acknowledged the same, whereupon the baillie ordained him either to make payment theirof to her or to be imprisoned till he paid the same, and that the said Francis not having paid was imprisoned and allowed the benefite of open prison as a burges, who, notwithstanding of his oath to be a faithful burges, contraveened the foresaid sentence and authority by coming out of the tolbooth at the evening without liberty and going to James Cusheys, taylor, where he was apprehended and brought back to prison; and theirfor the said baillie left it to the council to proceed against Hunter on account forsaid as they should think fitt; and the said Francis Hunter being brought before and examined by the council on what above represented, he the said Francis Hunter judicially acknowledged that he was imprisoned for the above thirty eight shilling resting by him, and afterwards went out of prison without liberty in regard he was terrified to lye in prison all night, two malefactors having been taken furth of the tolbooth and execute yesterday, and came in the councils will for breaking of prison or coming out thereof in manner forsaid without liberty. [The magistrates and council declared Hunter's burgess right to be forfeited, and he was ordered to be kept in prison till the 38 s. be paid.] Act declaring a burges ticket void.

25 July, 1724.

The council appoint Andrew Wright, toun thesaurer, to give to John Cunninghame, toun officer, six pound Scots for his going twice to Alloa and bringing back two women, that had left their young children in this burgh to be a burden theirto, and waiting severall days on the hangman before the late executions. £6 to toun officer; execution.

1 August, 1724.

The council considering the great decorement that John Don, sheriff clerk, has made to the street of the Baxters Wynd by building a spacious lodging at the head of Bells Closs and the wings to his entry thereto from the said street, one quhairof is presently in building and the other designed, they for his encouragement quitt and discharge all bygone few or ground annualls that were resting owing to the said burgh furth of the ground or houses in Bells Closs purchased and acquired by the said John Don. Reuouncing the feu duties, &c., to clerk Don.

21 November, 1724.

The council approve of ane accompt spent in the council house with General Wade and others, being £53 5 s. Scots money. General Wade.

14 December, 1724.

The council revive all former acts made anent the magistrats visiting their severall quarters for purging the same of extranious louse and idle persons, and of new recomend to the magistrats to goe through their severall quarters, and to call each of them a merchant and a trades councillour to their assistance, and take up a list of the poor within this burgh really belonging theirto, and of any other extranious persons, that such may be putt out of the burgh for preventing its being over burdened with extranious poor, as it has been for a long time past, and to the end [the poor] really belonging to the burgh may have badges given them for their better subsistance. Poor of the burgh.

2 January, 1725.

St. Ninians mercate.

The council appoint John Don, toun thesaurer, to give to Charles Ross, procurator fiscall, six pound Scots for his pains and expenses in going severall times of late to St. Ninians on mercate days and helping to bring in fleshes to the mercate of this burgh that were selling at St. Ninians.

Grant in favours of the maltmen.

The magistrates and toun councill having considered the representation formerly given in to them by Thomas Archibald, visitor, John Thomsone, Thomas Campbell, and James Nicoll, merchants and maltmen, burgesses of the said burgh, and Andrew Muirhead, maltman, burgess there, present masters of the incorporation of maltmen within the said burgh, for themselves and in name and behalf of the remanent maltmen therein, as being authorized by their act of court to the effect aftermentioned, humbly shewing that where the maltmen within this burgh their being imbodied or incorporate, having been for many years bypast, by indulgence and under the shadow and protection of the saids magistrats and councill and their predecessors in office, the maltmen have alwise gratefully acknowledged the same and would never presume to do or enact any thing in relation to their entries or other publick concerns of any moment without speciall allowance from or authority of the saids magistrates and councill or their forsaids for that effect, from whom they have had many favourable grants and concessions; and seeing that the better regulation of the entries with the maltmen as to the particulars aftermentioned, nor what has been hitherto provided, might in all appearance tend to the increase of the maltmens stock or common good, and consequently to the furder releif and support of their poor; and seeing that other incorporations have provided and enacted that no child or childeren of any intrant with such a society, being married or forisfamiliat time of their father or father in law's entry therewith, shall have any priveledge or advantage therby, but when they come to enter with any such incorporation and be admitted as members thereof they pay thereto for their entry as strangers, and that the representants humbly conceived it might be judged as reasonable that the incorporation of maltmen should be as far allowed, indulged, or priviledged that way, as others lay down rules to themselves, and that no hardship can justly be pretended by any such indulgence or concession from the said councill, since that such as neglect to enter in due time, before their children be married or forisfamiliat, have themselves only to blame if their children suffer thereby by paying dearer for their entry with the maltmen then they would otherwise have done had their parents entered in due time for their advantage, and therefore craving to the effect underwritten; which being upon the thirtieth of January last tabled, and then and now read in publick councill, they find the desire of the representation reasonable and grant the same; and hereby not only ratify and approve of all their former acts and grants in favours of the said maltmen, but also statute, enact, and appoint that the child or childeren of any person or persons entering with the maltmen, who be married or forisfamiliat time of their parents entry with the maltmen, shall have no ease, benefite, or advantage by their saids parents entry, but be oblidged to pay as strangers, when they shall enter as maltmen, to the thesaurer or box-master of the said incorporation. Grant in favours of the maltmen.

8 February, 1725.

The council recomends to provost Johnston, the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener, to meet with Mr. Dickie, watchmaker, to sight the touns clock and consider whether it will be best to cause mend her or make ane new clock. Touns clock.

1 May, 1725.

The council, as patrons of the Neather Hospital, appoint the masters theirof to give to the laird of Cambus Wallace and James Watson, merchants, twelve pounds Scots for defraying the expence of planting trees on the walk in the Back brae. Planting the Back brae.

19 June, 1725.

The council considering how much it would contribute to the trade of this burgh if the toun and abbay foords of the water of Forth were red and cleared, that vessels might come the length of the shoar of Stirling, recomend to the magistrats, provost Johnston, dean of gild, and conveener, to take the advice of knowing people in that affair and to cause red the saids foords by lifting and taking out the big stones and others therein, and to doe every other thing thereanent which will most tend to the advantage of the burgh; and declare they will approve of the expences that beis paid out on that account. Reding the toun and abbay foords.

Correction house.

Recomend to the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener, to provide a house, vaults, or some other proper house of correction, for keeping the poor of the shire and others to be putt therein, conform to act of parliament and late act of the commissioners of supplie of this shire.

2 October, 1725.

£4 16s. for a carpet.

The provost presented a letter to him from William Pearson, vintner in Edinburgh, acquainting the provost that Robert Anderson, servant to Boquhan, having paid at London four pound sixteen shillings starling for a carpet to the council house of this burgh, had drawn bill therfore upon the provost payable to the said William Pearson, which being considered by the magistrats and council they appoint John Don, late toun thesaurer, to pay to provost Johnston the said four pound sixteen shillings starling.

10 November, 1725.

Corn mercate and setts of the customs.

The magistrats and council, before proceeding to the setting of the annual customs of this burgh for ane year to come after Martinmas next inclusive, judge it necessar that there be a corn mercate in this burgh for oats or corn and pease and beans, either in the meall mercate thereof or any other part that the council shall think fitt and provide, and for the encouragement thereof statute, enact, and appoint that, during the council present and to come their pleasure, all such corn or oats, pease and beans, that shall be brought to and laid doun in the corn mercate shall be free from all payment of any laidle or other dues furth thereof, and of all custome, single and double, at the bridge, Burrowsgate, and Ballengiech therefore, and that the taxmen who shall take these customes shall have the same sett with the said burden. And furder, the council considering that, through some design or manadgement of the last taxman of the touns fishing of the water of Forth, the free fishing boat thereon which belongs to the first minister of this burgh was unsett for the last year, therefore, and for preventing the like for this year, provide and enact that the touns said fishing shall be sett for the ensuing year with the burden of the said free fishing boat belonging to the first minister being allwise first sett, not under sixteen pound Scots for the said year, before the taxman can sett any of the touns fishing cobles, and that the taxman be answerable to any who beis first minister for the said sixteen pound.

The council appoint intimation of ane weekly mercate of corn or oats and pease and beans to be kept within this burgh in the meall mercate therof, or such other place as the council shall appoint and provide, free of laidle money and other meall mercate dues, and of customs, single or double, either at the bridge, Burrowsgate or Ballengiech, during the councils pleasure, for such of saids grains as shall be brought to and laid doun in the mercate for sale, to be made by publick bank through this burgh upon Friday next the twelvth currant, that the country may be acquainted therof for their encouragement to bring their oats, pease and beans, to be sold thereat. Act for ane corn mercate.

13 November, 1725.

The provost, baillies, aud toun council of the said burgh, taking to consideration the vacancy of the function of first minister of this burgh by the decease of the reverend Mr. James Brisbane, their late eminent and worthy pastor, and how desireable it were the same should be speedily supplied, they did and hereby doe nominate and appoint doctor James Johnston, provost, [and four others, to desire the presbytery to moderate in a call]. Call to the first minister.

22 January, 1726.

The council having considered the representation formerly given in to them by Anna Rennie, schoolmistress in Stirling, read upon the eighteenth of January last and ordained to lye upon the table to this day, and now again read, and that her qualifications and fitness for the education and instruction of girles in this burgh, and others who may come from the country thereto to be taught and instructed, in suing of white and colloured seams, washing, dressing, &c., is sufficiently known by some years experience, they, for her encouragement to stay in this burgh and keep a school therein for the end forsaid, doe hereby nominate and appoint her schoolmistress within this burgh to the effect forsaid, and for her better encouragement to teach and instruct as above they grant and allow to her the yearly sallary of fifty merks Scots, doted and mortified by former acts of council to be paid to a schoolmistress within this burgh for the more easy and better education and instruction of girles within this burgh, and strangers that may come thereto, in suing, sheaping, washing, dressing, &c.; with this provision alwise, that whatever crape the said Anna Rennie shall stand in need of for making dead cloaths she shall buy the Act installing Anna Rennie schoolmistress.

same from the merchants within this burgh, as she shall be directed by her employers, or find she can be most conveniently furnished by merchants in this burgh, when her employers doe not furnish the crape themselves, the merchants from whom she shall buy allwise furnishing her in sufficient crape and at as easy rates as she could be served from other burghs, expence of carriage considered.

Grant to the mechanicks.

The council, upon the representation formerly given in to them by the mechanicks of this burgh, past ane ratification act and grant in favours of the said mechanicks, which was read in council and is recorded and signed by the preses in the principall council book.

30 April, 1726.

Anent redding the abbay foord.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill, recommend to the provost to write to Mr. M'Gill, architect, to come up to Sterling to view the abbay foord and give his advice what will be the most proper way and method for redding the said foord of the stones therein, deepning and making the same more navigable without hazard to vessells, and what toolls and instruments will be necessar to be provided for that end; and nominate and appoint the provost, baillies, dean of gild, conveener and treasurer, or plurality of them, to take the said Mr. M'Gill his advice therein, and from time to time to give orders for prosecuting thereof, and to call what other persons they shall think fitt to their assistance therein till the work be compleated, and to give orders for preparing what toolls or instruments may be necessar thereto and for payment thereof, and to give such gratification to Mr. M'Gill for his travail and advice as they shall think fitt.

26 May, 1726.

Meason admitted burgess; manse.

Receives and admitts Robert Hendersone, meason, to the liberty and freedome of a neighbour and burges of this burgh, who being present made faith as use is. And the councill considering the great pains the said Robert was att in drawing ane handsome draught of the alteration of the first minister's manse of this burgh, they quitt his entry payable to the burgh, being twenty four pound Scots, for and in remuneration thereof.

Transcribing chartour granted by King Charles II.

Recommends to the dean of gild and conveener to look out the chartour granted be King Charles the Second to this burgh and deliver the same to the clerk to be transcribed, that the councill and other inhabitants of this burgh may have access to read the same in the clerks chamber, and that the principall chartour after it beis transcribed may be returned to the touns chartour house.

Transcribing chartour granted by King Charles II.

13 June, 1726.

The committee appointed for overseeing the redding and deepning the abbay and toun foords in the water of Forth reported that ane offer had been made to them by Thomas Campbell, present toun treasurer, and Robert Willisone, tenant in Hood of the abbay of Cambuskenneth, to redd and deepen the head of the abbay foord in such a manner that for sixty foot breadth and seventy foot in length they should redd out the stones and other obsticles to the navigation on the top of the said foord, so that in the whole forsaid space there shall be two foot more deepness than there is att present, after meiths taken at the beg stone of the present surface of the channell, which is to be marked by two to be appointed by the councill and other two by the said Thomas Campbell and Robert Willisone, and the place of beginning and ending the said redding and deepning to be appointed by the said two persons to be chosen by each party; which proposall they undertake for the reward of fifteen pound starling, ten pound whereof to be paid and advanced immediately, and the other fyve pound at compleating the work; providing that if in the redding a confirmed whinn rock (which cannot be done without burning and blowing) occurr, which if it happens they shall report to the councill, who are to take to their consideration how the same shall be removed, and what proportionall part of the reward proposed they shall have for what they have done. Which report and proposall the toun councill taking to their serious consideration, they have unanimously aggreed to it, and hereby appoint Robert Wingate, present dean of guild, and James Buchanan, present deacon conveener, to enter into a contract in name of the toun councill of Sterling with the said Thomas Campbell and Robert Willisone in the above mentioned terms of proposall.

Act anent redding the abbay foord.

18 June, 1726.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill of the said burgh, having considered the proposall made to them be John Watson, writter in Stirling, recorded on the thirteenth of June current, for making the Long Calsie from the bridge to the end of the said calsie a sufficient road, so far as not already channelled, by laying two foots of calsie att least on each side of the calsie or road with great stones, and laying the rest thereof with stones flatt, two or three inches lower than the calsie on the sides, and covering the same with gravell and sand, and furnishing all materialls and workmanship thereto, and to uphold and leave the same in sufficient condition for the space and att the end of fourty years from and after the finishing of the said work, and to find sufficient caution for doing thereof, viz., James and Robert Watsons, merchants in Stirling, John Don, sherreif clerk of Sterling, William Stirling, chyrurgeon, and William Urquhart, wryter there, and that for the rate of six pounds Scots for the rude of measure. The magistratts and council after reasoning thereon agree to the said proposall.

Grant of buriall place to John Watson.

Johne Watsone, wryter in Sterling, represented to the magistratts that albeit he has considerable property within this burgh yet he hes no place for burying assigned for him and his family therein, and there is a void betwixt the two pillars or buttrages at the east end of the Inner Church without the wall thereof on the northeast side of the stair leading up to the schollars laft, which would serve for the end forsaid, and that he is content if allowed to him to build ane aceler stone dyke on the front or outside thereof, six foot high or thereby, for inclosing thereof, and therefore creaved the magistratts and councill would grant and allote the same to him and his heirs to the end forsaid; which being considered by the magistratts and councill, they find the desire reasonable, and that the granting thereof can be no way prejudiciall to the said church or any person, and therefor hereby give, grant, and allote, to the said John Watsone and his heirs the forsaid piece of void ground betwixt the forsaids two pillars or buttrages, to be inclosed on his own charges in manner above mentioned, and possest by the said John and his forsaids for their burying place in all time coming.

2 July, 1726.

Maltmen and mechanicks to collect offering.

Having considered the petition given in to them by the kirk session of this burgh, they appoint the visitor of the maltmen and deacon or overseer of the mechanicks and their successors alternatly to order one of their number to attend at the foot of the stair leading to the maltmens seat and mechanicks loft in the church each sermon day, whether on the Lords day or week day, with a plate or cup in order to collect the offerings that beis given by those that enter that way for the use of the poor.

16 July, 1726.

The magistratts and councill having considered the representation given in to them be Andrew Muirhead, visitor of the maltmen, and masters of the same maltmen, for themselves and in name of the remanent members of the said society of maltmen, creaving the councill might rectify their act of the second of July current and to exeem the maltmen from said appointment in respect they have not their entry to but only their exit from the church by the door they were allowed severall years ago to strick out on their oun charges, and that the maltmen do not enter by the said door, and had the forsaid priviledge of stricking out the same allowed them with the express provision that they should not enter to the church by the same, but only have their exit thereat; and in regaird such ane appointment would be most injurious to the maltmen if continued upon them, since the time they should stand, whether on the Lord's day or week day, would for the most part interfier with the time when they behoved to turn or work their malt when on the floor, which is known to be a work of necessity, otherwayes the same would entirely spoil. The council, in respect of the saids weighty reasons and that the maltmen were no way apprised of the ingiving of the petition mentioned in the foresaid act of councill and whereon it proceeded, rescind and recall the said act of the second of July current so far as relates to the maltmen, and free them from standing alternatly with the mechannicks as thereby appointed, and that so long as the maltmen shall not enter to the church by the forsaid door; but declare the forsaid act and appointment to continue in force as to the mechannicks, and appoint them allenarly by turns successively, one after another, to stand and collect as thereby appointed in all time coming, in respect they promised so to do att obtaining the liberty to erect their laft.

Act exeeming maltmen from collecting.

20 August, 1726.

Anent the representation of Patrick Morisone, present deacon of the incorporation of cordners within the said burgh, for himself and in name of the remanent members thereof, formerly given in to the saids magistrats and councill, humbly shewing that where albeit the members of said incorporation, by the constitution of their trade and regulation of the burgh, pay considerably for their entry with both, and bear scot and lot by quartering, watching, &c., proportionally with any other tradesmen incorporate in said burgh, yet their trade and handycraft and priviledge thereof is by far most encroached upon by country cordners, and especially these living in that part of the Castlehill pretended to be within the constabulary, and other confines of this burgh, and thereby can and do make the most frequent encroatchments in respect of their nighness to the burgh by taking measures therein, or though without the same by conveying the made shoes or other cordner work to their employers therein in such clandestine way and manner as cannot be easily discovered or found out, and although by the custome of the said trade and unquestionable power of their priviledge they have, past memory of man, been in use by any of their members or officer of their trade to seise upon made work belonging to the cordner craft, when made or done by any unfreemen and brought into and found within this burgh for the use of any of the inhabitants thereof, except upon fair dayes or the weekly mercate day, where such made work has been presented and exposed to sale in the mercate place within the time allowed for that end by the constitution of the burgh, and to confiscate such shoes or other made work besides payment of a fine; yet as such discoveries are hard to be made, and by cunning and shamm frequently evaded, so the representant and his trade humbly conceive that were the saids magistratts and councill their authority specially interposed to the said trades former custome and practice in such particular way and manner as would tend to the disappointment of such evasions and clandestine mannagements, such indirect practices and encroatchments would be more effectually prevented; and therefore craving the saids magistrats and councill might be pleased to take the premisses to their serions consideration, and not only to ratifie [their previous privileges but also make certain statutes for their farther advantage. The council thereupon not only ratified all former acts and grants in favor of the cordiners], but also statute and enact that no cordner not entered with this burgh and said incorporation of cordners therein shall in any time coming have power to take any measures of shoes or other cordner work therein, or carry and use any measuring instruments or worklooms thereto, or to send or bring made work to the same unless to the public fairs or weekly mercate as above, and that under the pain of three pound Scots money to be paid by each country cordner contraveening, toties quoties, as such unfree cordners be apprehended within the said burgh, taken before a magistrat and convict of said transgression; and hereby allow and authorise the masters or officer of the said incorporation of cordners, upon suspicion of cordner made work by unfreemen, their servants, or others, being brought to this burgh for the use of any of the inhabitants thereof, to search for the same upon the publick streets, lanes, or passages thereof, and if found to seise upon and detain the said made work till the person with whom the same beis found be brought before and convict by a magistrat that the same is to or for the behoof of any of the inhabitants of this burgh, and that if so found the councill ordain the made work seised to be confiscate and the maker thereof fined as above, toties quoties, for such encroatchment and indirect practice against and to the prejudice of the said incorporation of cordners their priviledge. Providing and declaring alwise not only that the members of the said incoporation of cordiners within this burgh, present and to come, be bound and oblidged by the councills granting, and the said incorporations accepting hereof, to furnish and provide the burgesses and other inhabitants of this burgh and their servants and families from time to time, as the said cordiners be employed, with as good and sufficient shoes and other cordner work, both as to workmanship and leather, and att as reasonable rates, as the country cordiners can or may do but also, that the touns cordners when desired or employed to make shoes or other cordner work as above to any of the inhabitants thereof or any of their families, that they do it against the precise day they or any of them shall undertake to have them ready, under the pain of two pound money forsaid to be paid by each of the touns cordners so undertaking and failyeing to perform to any of the inhabitants that employs them and complanis to a magistrat for their failyie and neglect, unless the said cordner or cordners so undertaking and failyeing can give and instruct a sufficient excuse for the same, that the saids inhabitants be not trysted with such disappointments that way as severalls of them and these in their families have frequently hitherto been. Reserving alwise power and faculty to the saids magistrats and councill and their successors in office at any time hereafter to alter, rescind, or innovate this present act and grant, in haill or part, as they may find necessar cause for.

Act and grant in favours of the cordners.

6 September, 1726.

The councill appoint the dean of gild, att the expence of the gildry, to provide a silver fringe to the flagg of the gildrys stannard, and a leathern bagg to putt the flagg in for the better preservation thereof.

Silver fringe to the gildrys flagg.

Repairing two wells.

It being represented to the councill that within these five years or thereby two young children have perisht in the draw-well by reason of the samen not being covered nor built about, the councill for preventing the like danger for the future appoint Thomas Campbell, toun treasurer, to cause cover or build about the said well in such sufficient way and manner as there may be no such danger that way, and likewise to cause repair Balines well att the foot of the Mary Wynd sufficiently that no such accident may fall out thereat.

£3 to quartermaster for extraordinar.

The councill considering the great trouble and fatigue that John Lowrie, quartermaster of this burgh, has had in the discharge of his office by reason of the generall's being two severall times in this burgh since Michaelmass last reviewing the forces, they, besides the four pound starling of sallary annually allowed him for the discharge of his said office, grant and allow to him three pound starling for his extraordinar pains in said space.

22 September, 1726.

£6 to Mr. M'Gill, architect.

The councill approve of the treasurers giving to provost Johnston to pay to Mr. M'Gill, architect, six pound starling for his pains in coming from Edinburgh and viewing the foords of the water of Foarth that were to be redd.

Expense of riding the fair.

The councill considering the great number of gentlemen and others that were invited to dinner att the riding of the last fair, whereby the expense thereof amounted to a considerable sum, they, for releiving the cornet and other young gild bretheren of a part thereof, appoint Thomas Campbell, toun treasurer, to pay in to James Nicoll, toun clerk, who furnisht the treat and liquors, the sum of twelve pound starling money in part of the expense thereof.

18 October, 1726.

Grant in favours of chapmen.

Anent the petition formerly given in to the saids provost, baillies, and toun councill, be Murdoch King, William Adam, John Watsone, James Jaffray, John Lockhart, James Hendersone and James Taylor, chapmen in the burgh and shyre of Sterling, for themselves and in name and behalf of the remanent chapmen therein that did or should concurr with them in said petition, humbly shewing that whereas in former times the chapmen within the said burgh and shyre were in use annually to elect one of their number to be their lord chapman, and other officers to bear rule over them for their better government in the management and exercise of their small retail trade, and making up a fund for the support of their poor and preventing of frauds and abuses that might be practised by any of them in the exercise of their employment towards one another or the country by unfair deallings, and particularly by shortness of their weights or measures, especially in buying or selling at publick fairs or mercates, and punishing of such delinquents; and that the like practice is still continued amongst chapmen of other burghs and shyres, particularly in Perth, Fife, and others adjacent, without any detriment to or infringement on the magistrats civill power or infringement on the priviledges of gildries or gild bretheren; so there seems to be evidently as great reason and need for the chapmen in the said burgh and shyre of Sterling their being indulged or countenanced to incorporate or enter themselves into a joint society att this time to the end abovementioned as ever, for preventing such frauds and abuses which are no less frequent now than formerly, especially in the yairds and weights, much occasioned through the petitioners wanting of a lord chapman and other office bearers who, as they will have most frequent occasiones and nearest access to discover such, so can (if so indulged and countenanced) best prevent such indirect practices by punishing thereof according to the custome and rules of such societies in other burghs and shyres, and under such limitations, restrictions, and regulations, as the saids magistrats and councill should think fitt to appoint; and seeing that the saids chapmen their being so imbodied or incorporate and having allowance annually to elect a lord chapman and other office bearers amongst themselves to the effect above mentioned, by the saids magistrats and councill their countenance and authority, can never free or exeem the saids chapmen from being subject to the saids magistrats and councill their jurisdiction, or any way impare the same or their authority over the saids chapmen, nor in the least be a mean of their infringement on the rights and priviledges of the gildry of Sterling, or any way exeem and far less protect them from due punishment if they should transgress, but only tend to the better government of themselves in their way of trade and preventing of frauds and abuses therein. . . . . The saids provost, baillies, and haill remanent members of the town councill, as representing the community thereof, after full mature deliberation thereon unanimously found what creaved reasonable and granted the desire of the said petition in manner underwritten, and did and hereby do, with and under the provisions, declaration, regulation, power, and faculty after exprest, indulge and allow the saids petitioners, and such other chapmen within the said burgh and shyre as shall join with and adhere to them in said matter, to incorporate or imbody themselves into a tollerate society or incorporation of chapmen within the said burgh and shyre: with power to them and their successors, chapmen therein, annually to elect within the said burgh allennarly a lord chapman and other necessar office bearers amongst them for their better government and preventing frauds and abuses amongst them in manner forsaid in their trade or retailing; and to receive from intrants with them what is usuall in such cases in this or the adjacent shyres, to be alwise applied for the behoof of their poor; and to lay doun and enact such regulations, rules, and acts amongst themselves for the ends above mentioned as are or shall be consonant to the laws of the kingdome from time to time; and to punish such of their number as shall transgress their rules, regulations, and acts, that beis made amongst themselves to the ends above mentioned, by fines and unlaws or extrusion from their society therefore, as use is or has been practised by the like societies in such cases and as they shall find just cause; the samen fines to be alwise applied for the end above mentioned and the better support of their tollerate society; hereby declaring that this present grant shall be never construed any way prejudiciall to or inconsistent with the saids provost, baillies, and toun councill their authority over the saids chapmen, or the priviledges of the said gildry of Sterling in any respect whatever; but that the saids chapmen and each of them present or to come shall be as subject to the saids magistrats and councill their authority respectively, and for encroatchments on the gildrys priviledges, as they are presently att or have in any time past been subject or liable thereto for any delinquencies, transgressions, or encroachments, falling under their cognisance and determination. And reserving full power, liberty, and faculty to the saids magistrats and toun councill, and their successors in office att any time hereafter, to alter, rescind, or innovate this present act and grant, in haill or part, as they shall find and judge necessar cause for.

£9 to some carriers.

Appoints Thomas Campbell, toun treasurer, to give to William and Alexander Chalmers, carriers, burgesses of this burgh, nine pound Scots for and in liew of the loss they sustained in carrying the baggage of some companies and a troop from this to Auchterairder and Dunfermline, both in harvest last, the carters having been then taken two severall days from their harvest, and the said nine pound to be proportioned amongst the carriers themselves according to their respective carriages and losses.

£9 to some carriers.

3 January, 1727.

The councill being acquainted that the carters employed by the magistrates of this burgh to carry part of the baggage on Munday last, the 16th current, that belonged to two of the companies of brigadeer Groves regiment, from this to Linlithgow, had their horses and carts forcibly taken from them and detained, and next day thereafter taken to carry the heavy baggage of saids companies by order or allowance of some of the magistrats of Linlithgow from thence to Edinburgh, whereby the carts and horses have been much damnified, if not rendered useless, the toun councill judging the same to be most contrair to law, and ane unprecedented insult and abuse done to this burgh, recommend to the magistrats thereof to examine furder into the affair and prosecute the actors thereof, whether the magistrats of Linlithgow or any of them or their order or direction or any of the military, that all due satisfaction and reparation may be made therefore both to this burgh and to the carters, both with respect to the insult and oppression and damnage sustained by the carters thereby.

other proper places by the way as they went to Greenock, they had conversed with and informed themselves by ministers and other creditable, judicious, and disinterested persons, anent the character and qualifications of Mr. William Erskine, schoolmaster at Greenock, and his fitness to succeed Mr. Thomas Darling, late schoolmaster of this burgh, and that from all hands they conversed with or spoke to on that head, and particularly from the minister of Greenock and many others therein they gott a very savoury accompt about the said Mr. Erskine, both as to his sufficiency in letters, prudentialls, government of his schollars, sobriety of life, and tenderness of conversation, loyalty to his Majesty, and other qualifications fitting and capacitating him to be a very proper person for supplying the present vacancy of a schoolmaster in this place, and that they had afterwards conversed with Mr. Erskine himself, acquainted him of the councills design and desired him to come up as soon as possible to commune with the magistrats and councill anent the settling him in the forsaid office, and told him they expected his compliance and behooved to have his answer, to which he gave them this return that it being new to him he would advise thereon, and, if he came not up himself, wonld write his answer to the magistrats and councill as soon as possible. Of which report the councill unanimously approved and gave their commissioners the councills hearty thanks for their pains and prudent management in said matter.

29 April, 1727.

Accompt approven.

The councill approve of a particular accompt of two pound five shillings and ten pence starling paid out by Thomas Campbell, toun treasurer, to John Paton, stationer in Edinburgh, for the Brittish acts of parliament, undecimo and duodecimo, bound, and acts of assembly from 1721 to 1725, both inclusive.

27 May, 1727.

Anent grammar schoolmaster and augmenting quarter payments.

The councill, taking to their serious consideration that in pursuance of their former acts Mr. William Erskine, late schoolmaster at Greenock, has now come up in order to enter into contract with this burgh and be settled as master of the grammar school thereof, the councill for his better encouragement thereto declare and appoint that the former sallary of five hundered merks Scots yearly shall be payable to the said Mr. William Erskine as schoollmaster forsaid, that he shall have the possession of the schooll and schoollhouse and the same upheld to him as former schoolmasters had, that he shall have the possession of the yaird formerly possest be the schoollmaster and lately acquired by this burgh without payment of any rent therefore to this burgh, and that there shall be due and payable to him as schoolmaster forsaid quarterly the following quarter payments, viz., eight shilling for and by each boy that beis putt to learn the English in said grammar schooll, and ten pence for and by each boy that beis putt to learn the Latin in said schooll, besides his Candlemass offering, but prejudice to him to receive more from any of the touns boys if their parents or others taking care of them in their generosity give it, and likewise but prejudice to him to take from gentlemen and outentouns bairns according to the discretion of the givers and as he and they shall aggree; and also providing that all male childeren above six years of age within the said burgh shall come to the said schooll, and that it shall not be lawfull for any above that age to be taught in any other schooll within the said burgh, neither shall any have liberty to keep schooll for that effect therein; and, lastly, it is hereby declared that the said Mr. William Erskine is to continue schoolmaster forsaid ad vitam aut culpam, and that he shall be taken engaged in the contract that beis made with him to serve and continue in the forsaid station accordingly.

Anent grammar schoolmaster and augmenting quarter payments.

24 June, 1727.

It being represented to the councill that the church bells of this burgh are in danger of falling by reason of the deficiency of the gudgeons, the councill recommend to the dean of gild and conveener, William Henry Allan, merchant councillour, and deacon Blackader, to sight the saids bells and to give directions for mending the gudgeons and what else necessar.

Act anent the church bells.

30 June, 1727.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill of the said burgh, being conveened, signed an address to his Majesty, condoling our late sovereign lord King George his demise and congratulating his Majesty on his accession to the crown and dignity of these realms, and recommended to provost Johnston to transmitt the same to the laird of Boquhan, member of parliament for this burgh and the burghs adjoined thereto, to be presented by him to his Majesty.

Act anent an address to King George the Second.

12 August, 1727.

Act installing the towns pyper.

The councill appoints Alexander Glass, pyper at St. Ninians, to be town piper of this burgh during the councills pleasure, and to go thro' this burgh playing with his pypes every week day at four aclock in the morning and at seven aclock at night, and allowes him thirty six pound Scots of sallary yearly; and declare they will allow him a meet bodied coat with the towns livery thereon, and a blew bannet with a cock of ribbons on it, once every two years during his continuance in said office; providing that the said Alexander Glass be oblidged not to go out of this burgh without liberty first asked and obtained thereto from one of the magistratts from time to time, and that only to be absent to go thro' at seven at night when his absence is absolutely necessar, but declaring it shall not be in the power of any of the magistrates present or to come to admitt of the said pypers absence to go thro' at four aclock each morning.

26 August, 1727.

Black cloaths on magistrats lafts, &c.

Approve of a particular accompt due to James Brown, deacon of the taylors, extending to £18 19 s., for mending and altering the black cloaths on the magistrats and other lafts in the church and some furnishings thereto.

£12 12 s. to a minister in Ireland.

Appoints Andrew M'Lewham, toun treasurer, to give to Mr. James Stewart, minister of the gospell in Kirkdonald in Ireland, twelve pound twelve shilling Scots for helping to build a meeting house there, the said Mr. Stewart being sufficiently recommended for that effect.

29 January, 1728.

Accompt about prisoners who broke prison.

The councill considering the great trouble and fatigue that the toun officers of this burgh have gott of late about the publick concerns thereof, and particularly in searching after William Walker and John Gardner when they had broke prison, they allow the saids officers twelve pound Scots therefore.

6 April, 1728.

Act and recommendation anent the grammar schooll.

The councill taking to their serious consideration the complaints that have been made to them by severalls of the burgesses, and other inhabitants of this burgh and others, of the non proficiency of many of the boys att the grammar schooll of the said burgh, and particularly of those of them who are learning the English, writting and compting, through the neglect or default of the doctors in said schooll, by reason of their wanting of authority over these whom they teach, and of a due way and method of communicating what they teach to these under their inspection, and that the magistrats att their last visitation of the schooll found it upon examination to be so, and being fully perswaded that one sufficient English doctor capable to teach writting and arithmetick may serve for that end to instruct these boys who are putt to the said schooll therein, and being likewise of opinion that the best method for regulating the said schooll and providing the same with sufficient doctors or under teachers is to referr the recommendation and nomination of fitt persons for discharging the same to Mr. William Erskine, head master of the said schooll; therefore, and for the better proffiting the youths that are att or beis putt thereto, [they empowered him to nominate such doctors or under teachers as he may judge most efficient], that the councill may continue or install them accordingly.

Act and recommendation anent the grammar schooll.

3 August, 1728.

The councill approve of the two accompts given in be William Henry Allan, painter, viz., of one of sixteen pound ten shilling for making a new wheell to the bigg bell in the church steeple, and of another of ninteen pound ten shilling for a new press for sealling the burgess tickets, and for whitening and painting George Hendersons roums.

Bell in church steeple, &c.

17 August, 1728.

It being represented to the councill that the convention of burrows, by ane act att their last meeting, appointed the sealls of the royall burrows to be sent in to the lord lyon king att arms in order that he may inspect if they be taken out or cutt without acknowledging his lordship or his predecessors in that office, and that under a certain penalty to be forfeited by each burgh failyeing, the councill in consideration thereof recommend to the dean of gild and deacon conveener to transmitt this burghs great seall, consisting of two halfs, and this burghs small seall, the bigg one being copper and the small silver, and to take care the same be carefully returned, and the saids sealls given up to the dean of gild and conveener for that end in face of councill.

Sending in towns seallsto the lord lyon.

14 September, 1728.

Grant to the barbers and weigmakers.

The councill having under their serious consideration a representation and petition given in to them severall months ago be James Lockart, barber and weigmaker and merchant burges of this burgh, present overseer to the tollerat incorporation or society of barbers and weigmakers within the same, for himself and in name of the remanent members of said incorporation, creaving upon the grounds therein sett furth that the magistrats and councill might now raise or augment the entries of such barbers and weigmakers as are strangers who shall hereafter enter neighbours burgesses with this burgh, as their wisdoms should think fitt, both with respect to the entry money payable by such to this burgh and to the said tollerat society of barbers and weigmakers therein; which having been att first presenting thereof and on severall dyets of councill since read in public councill, and being maturely deliberat by the saids magistrats and councill, they (butt prejudice to or innovation of the said tollerat incorporation of barbers their act and grant the first of September one thousand seven hundered and eighteen from the then magistrats and toun councill except in so far as the entries of such being strangers are altered hereby in manner underwritten) by this present act appoint, statute, and ordain that in all time coming, during the magistrats and councill present and to come their pleasure, each barber or weigmaker, being a stranger, who beis hereafter admitted to enter neighbour and burges of this burgh, shall pay to the toun treasurer for the time for behoof of this burgh twenty four pounds Scots for his entry as neighbour burges, and to the said tollerat society of barbers for his entry with them sixteen pound money forsaid, notwithstanding such entries were lower by the forsaid act and grant. Providing always, as it is hereby specially provided that the entry money payable to this burgh by the sons and apprentices of such barbers and weigmakers as are freemen of this burgh and entered with the said tollerat society shall still be and continue as formerly according to the said former act and grant.

17 September, 1728.

Act rejecting the taylors and fleshers leets, &c.

The incorporation of taylors having sent up James Cushnie, jaylor, and Thomas Wallace, castle souldier, and the incorporation of fleshers having sent up John Balfour, castle souldier, members of their respective leets from their trades to the councill, the councill reject the said James Cushnie, as being jaylor and so incapable of being one of the leet from his trade, and the said Thomas Wallace and John Balfour, as being castle souldiers and thereby incapable to elect or be elected, as being under the influence and command of their officers; and appoint the respective deacons of the saids two incorporations of taylors and fleshers immediatly to conveen the members of their respective trades to make choice of sufficient persons thereof and send them up to the councill for and in place of the saids three persons so rejected, and that under the pain of one hundered pound Scots each of the saids trades; and the councill declare and enact that in no time coming any souldier in the castle or in any regiment, or any of the touns servants, though entered with any of the incorporat trades, shall be capable to elect or be elected, sent up or received, as a member of the leets from any of the incorporat trades.

Act rejecting the taylors and fleshers leets, &c.

2 November, 1728.

It being overtured that a new clock should be provided to the towns steeple of this burgh because the present clock is very insufficient, the councill nominat [a committee] to consider thereof and take the advice of such knowing persons in the place as they shall think fitt thereanent, and what may be the best and easiest way for providing the burgh in a sufficient clock, and report.

Act anent the toun clock.

23 November, 1728.

The committee of councill formerly appointed for considering the most expedient way and manner for providing this burgh with a new town clock, made report that they had mett with Andrew Dickie, clock maker, and other knowing persons in this place, communed thereon and considered thereanent, and that they found it absolutely necessar that there should be a new clock provided, and that Mr. Dickie had offered to make a sufficient minut hand town clock for one hundered pound sterling, and thirteen musick bells which he judged might stand twenty five pound sterling or thereby, and that he would tune and sett up the whole without any furder expence to the burgh; which report being considered be the councill they recomend to the magistrats, dean of gild, conveener, and treasurer, to end fully with the said Andrew Dickie thereanent.

Act anent a new clock to the town.

25 November, 1728.

Act against mobbing and deforcing the officers of the customes.

The provost baillies and town councill of the said burgh being conveened and taking to their serious consideration the abominable practise that has within these few years past prevailed in sundry parts of this kingdome by mobbing and deforcing of his Majesties officers of the customes in the due and lawfull execution of their office, to the great prejudice of the publick revenue, in manifest contempt of lawfull authority and hurt of free and fair traders, and outmost danger both to the persons, means, and interest of such daring and presumptous offenders when found out or discovered; the saids magistrates and town councill, in tesminony of their detestation and abhorrence of all such villanies, and for preventing the doing thereof by any person or persons within the bounds and territories of this burgh or any others who shall haunt or resort thereto or have any trading to or with the same, doe hereby certify all merchants and others that if at any time hereafter they or any of them, or others of their causing, hounding out, order, or direction, shall any way hinder, stop, or impede any of the officers of his Majesties customes, or in disguise by tumult, mobb, or otherways, deforce them in the due aud legall execution of their offices on board of ships or boats, injure, hurt, or wound them in their persons, or otherways abuse them or their assistants when so in their duty, the saids magistrates and councill declare that if any of the merchants or burgesses of this burgh be found guilty of contravention hereof, they shall eo ipso not only forfitt and loose their priviledge as burges or gild brother in all time thereafter, but also the said magistrates and councill will use and exert their outmost power and interest to discover and detect all such, that they may be brought to condign punishment and proceeded against according to the laws in that behalf with the outmost rigour.

1 February, 1729.

Repairing kirk, tolbooth and new house.

The councill appoint Andrew M'Lequham, town treasurer, to cause repair the roofs of the church, tolbooth, and towns new house, with all conveniency, and likeways a holl that was some time ago broke through by one of the prisoners in the wall of the tolbooth, and to furnish all matterials necessar thereto.

3 April, 1729.

Musick bells to the clock.

The provost, baillies, and town councill of the said burgh, appoint Andrew M'Lequham, town treasurer, to pay in to Mr. Dickie, watchmaker, thirty six pound sterling for buying a bill to pay the musick bells for the towns clock, and this, with Mr. Dickies receipt thereon oblidging him to compt for what may be over, shall be sufficient document to the treasurer in his accompts, the said Mr. Dickie being free of any sea risk therefore, the bells being to come from London. Musick bells to the clock.

22 May, 1729.

Appoints Andrew M'Ilquhame, town treasurer, to pay to James Cushnie, jaylor, eighteen shillings starling, depurst by him on the mantinance of one M'Laren, who was sometime ago incarcerat in the tolbooth of this burgh by order of some of the magistrats for offering to sell hard mettle instead of silver to some people in this burgh. 18 s. starling to jaylor.

It being represented by Andrew Dickie, watchmaker, that William Sorely, hammerman, who was appointed by the councill to ring the bells in the towns steeple, was a very unfit persone for that purpose, and that the said William had latly when he went to ring the ten hour bell drawn down one of the paces of the towns new clock by standing thereon, and that he the said Andrew could not perform his contract with the town anent the said clock if the said William were continued in the foresaid statione of ringing the bells; which the councill having considered, and that the said Andrew having recomended Adam M'Arthure, hammerman in Sterling, as a fit persone for ringing the saids bells, and whome he judged would not midle with the said clock any manner of way, therefore the councill install the said Adam M'Arthure in room of the said William Sorely. Ringer of the town bells.

16 September, 1729.

Anent a petition or representation given in to the saids magistrats and councill be James Baird, present deacon to the incorporation of skinners or glovers within the said burgh, for himself and in name of the remanent members of said incorporation, humbly shewing that where for these many years past the petitioners have had no stock or common good as the rest of the seven incorporat trades have, but to the contrair were and are still in debt, by reason of which the deacon of the said incorporation of skinners has been alwise obliged to pay out of his own pocket any charges or expenses he was necessarly putt to in that office by going the marches and otherwise, and in Act and grant in favours of the skinners.

short any expenses or charges on account or for behoof of the trade the deacon has still paid out himself, which is a very great hardship, and whereby their poor of necessity are and must be burdensome on the common good of the burgh, and will still continue so and the forsaid debt remain unpaid unless remead be provided thereagainst; and whereas there are none of the said incorporat trades (except the said incorporation of skinners) but have some kind of gate penny and revenew payable and allowed to be levied by them from unfreemen for defraying the above expenses and supporting their poor; and seeing there might be some small gate penny or revenew uplifted and levied by the said incorporation of skinners or glovers each publick fair day out of the stands of chapmen who then cream in the mercat of this burgh, and are not gild bretheren or gild bretherens sons but strangers and unfreemen, and there sell or expose to sale gloves or any other kind of skinner or glover work, which if granted and allowed by the councill would tend much to the defraying of the above expenses and supporting the poor of said incorporation and paying off the forsaid debt; and therefore creaving that the councill might take what before represented to their serious consideration, and authorise and allow the said incorporation of skinners or glovers in time coming to uplift and levy what small gate penny the councill should think fitt, each publick fair day, out of every stand of chapmen who then cream in the mercat of this burgh, and are not gild bretheren or gild bretherens sons but strangers and unfreemen, and there sell or expose to sale gloves or any other kind of skinner or glover work. And the saids magistrats and councill having now fully and maturely deliberat on the said petition or representation, they grant the desire thereof under the reservation and exception aftermentioned, viz., they authorise, impower, and allow the said incorporation of skinners or glovers in time coming to uplift and levy one shilling Scots money, each publick fair day, out of every stand of chapmen who then cream in the mercat of this burgh, and are not gildbretheren or gildbretherens sons but strangers and unfreemen, and there sell or expose to sale gloves or any other kind of skinner or glover work; and if there be chapmen two or moe of the qualities abovementioned creaming in one stand, then and in that case the said incorporation are hereby allowed and impowered to uplift and levy one shilling Scots from each of them. Reserving always to the gildry of this burgh their priviledge of uplifting and levying any gate penny out of the saids stands as formerly; and not allowing any gate penny to be uplifted or levied by the said incorporation of skinners from chapmen who do not cream by putting up stands in the mercat.

Act and grant in favours of the skinners.

25 September 1729.

Anent the petition given in to the saids magistrats and councill by the society of mechannicks within the said burgh, mentioning that of late severall inhabitants of this burgh have, in respect of their being burgesses of one or other of the incorporations of the burgh, ingaged and brought in strangers from the country, not entered burgesses nor bearing any burden in the burgh, and imployed them to work in severalls of the handycrafts of the mechannicks, such as wrights, measons, and others, albeit the said strangers are not entered with the mechannicks; and in the next place others of the inhabitants, who being members of some of the other incorporations of the burgh, do yet use and exerce some one or other of the handycrafts of the mechannicks, and gain their subsistence and living thereby without entering with their society, and giving no assistance in common with them to advancement and improvement of their severall handycrafts, nor in the least contributing to their common charge: which mentioned practices tending evidently to the discouragement of the mechannicks, as thereby strangers are brought into the burgh and make gain att the hands of their employers, which they carry away without being concerned in the publick burdens of the burgh to be spent by them in the country, and which therefore does not circulat in the town; whereas in the meantime the mechannicks, whose business is to work in these handycrafts, are perhaps reduced to straits for the mantainance of their families by the want of the imployment which is given in manner forsaid to country tradesmen, and yet are liable to the publick burdens of the burgh and to the common charge of their society; and as the said society of mechannicks have anxiously provided for the support of the poor of their severall handycrafts so as to prevent their being burdensome to the burgh, and as they must of course be disabled from making the necessar provision for their poor if the forsaid practices be continued; and as besides the advancement and improvement of the severall handycrafts, which is to be expected to be the effect of suteable incouragement from the councill, the mechannicks have it furder to plead in their behalf for the councills favour in preference to strangers, that as they reside in the burgh with their families they are alwise att hand and ready to give their assistance upon any emergent occasion of fire or other sudden accident which may not admitt of delay . . . [After consideration of the petition, the magistrates and council] statute, enact, and ordain that in all time coming all measons, wrights, coupers, painters, glasiers, slaters, dysters, and plaisterers, as well entered as to be entered with the mechannicks and with this burgh as burgesses qua mechannicks, who do not reside themselves with their families att least eight months in the year within the burgh shall not have the liberty or priviledge of being undertakers of any mechannick work therein during their not residing within the same as aforsaid notwithstanding of their entries; and that all measons, wrights, coupers, painters, glasiers, slaters, dysters, and plaisterers, as well entered as to be entered with the mechannicks and with the burgh as burgesses qua mechannicks, shall not have the liberty or priviledge of imploying non residenters in the burgh, or unfreemen of the saids eight severall handycrafts, till they first make ane offer to the mechannicks of these imployments entered and living within the burgh as aforsaid; and that no inhabitant of the burgh who follows and professes any of the mechannick imployments shall have the liberty or priviledge of taking journeymen or apprentices under them as mechannick journeymen or apprentices till such time as he who takes them be himself first entered with the mechanicks; but statute, enact, and ordain that in all time coming any person entered or to be entered with the gildry, or with any of the seven incorporat trades of this burgh, who follows or practices any of the mechanick imployments and resides therein as aforsaid, shall still have the liberty and priviledge of following and practising any mechanick imployment, and of being ane undertaker of any mechanick work within the said burgh, and of taking mechanick journeymen or apprentices under them upon his paying in four pound Scots to the said society of mechanicks; and the saids magistrats and councill furder declare that he shall be free of all other charges or expenses for speaking drinks, or att going the marches and fairs of this burgh, or otherwise as a mechanick.

Act and grant in favours of the barbers and pirie-weigmakers.

Anent the representation and petition given in to the saids magistrats and councill by James Lockart, present overseer to the tollerat society or incorporation of barbers and weigmakers within the said burgh, for himself and in name of the remanent members of the said society, [referring to acts of town council in their favor dated 18 June 1696, 1 September 1718, and 14 September 1728], by which three severall acts and grants it might be thought that no person unentered with the burgh and said society of barbers and weigmakers should have the liberty or priviledge of exercing the forsaid art or trade of barbarising and pirieweigmaking within the said burgh, yet notwithstanding there be persons, one or moe, who have presumed and taken in hand to follow and practise the forsaid art or trade of barbarising and pirieweigmaking not only by themselves but also by bringing in journeymen to work under them in that art or trade within the said burgh without entering as aforsaid, under this colour or pretext that their being sons of merchant burgesses of this burgh intitles or allows them to follow and practise the forsaid art and trade of barbarising and pirieweigmaking within the same without entering therewith and with the said society as aforsaid. . . . . [After consideration of the petition and representation, the magistrates and council] statute, enact, and ordain that in all time coming all barbers or pirieweigmakers, as well entered as to be entered with the said society and with this burgh as burgesses qua barbers or pirieweigmakers, who do not reside themselves with their families att least eight months in the year within the burgh, shall not have the liberty or priviledge of barbarising or pirieweigmaking therein during their not residing within the same as aforsaid notwithstanding of their entries; and that no inhabitant of the burgh who follows and professes the said imploy shall have the liberty or priviledge of taking journeymen or apprentices under them as barber or pirieweigmaker journeymen or apprentices till such time as he who takes them be himself first entered with the said society: but statute, enact, and ordain that in all time coming any person entered or to be entered with the gildry or with any of the seven incorporat trades of this burgh, who follows and practices the forsaid art or trade of barbarising or pirieweigmaking and resides therein as aforsaid, shall still have the liberty and priviledge of following and practising that imploy within the said burgh and of taking barber or pirieweigmaker journeymen or apprentices under him upon his paying in four pound Scots to the said society of barbers and pirieweigmakers; and the saids magistrats and councill furder declare that he shall be free of all other charges or expenses for speaking drinks, or att going the marches and fairs of this burgh, or otherways as a barber or pirieweigmaker.

Act and grant in favours of the barbers and pirieweigmakers.

Accompt of the butts.

Appoints Andrew Muirhead, treasurer, to pay to George Monro, merchand, in name of the society of archers in this place, thirty five pound two shilling Scots debursed by him in building the butts and making ane entry thereto.

7 November, 1730.

Want of accomodation in church.

There were petitions from the gildry, seven trades, and other incorporations in the place, given into and read in the councill, complaining of their want of accomodatione in the church for hearing the gospell preached; which being considered by the councill, they do nominate and appoint the magistrats, dean of gild, conveener, and treasurer, with provost Littlejone, to meet with the reverend ministers of the place and to consult with them what is most proper to be done in said affair.

Want of accomodation in church.

Act dischargeing giving treats or tickets.

The magistrats and town councill of the said burgh taking to their serious consideratione the great expence the burgh is at by intertaining strangers and giving burgess tickets and treats, and that throw the solicitations of the burgers for their freinds and acquaintances it is become a servitude and most uneasy to the magistrats, as well as ane unnecessary and needless expence upon the burgh, therefore and for preventing the obtaining of the like bad practice for hereafter, the saids magistrats and councill doe hereby unanimously statute, enact, and ordain that in all time coming no treat nor burgess ticket shall be given to any persone or persons, nor no part of the publick revenew of this burgh shall be spent with such, on account of solicitatione or any other pretence whatever, without the consent of the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener of the said burgh, or majority of them, or the majority of them present in the town at the time of such treats or burgess tickets giving or such spendings making, and that the accompt of what so spent by any of the said magistrats with consent foresaid shall be by them brought in and read in councill the first or second dyets of councill after the same is spent bearing the magistrats or magistrat names spenders thereof.

16 November, 1730.

Anent preaching in both churches.

The magistrats and toun councill of the said burgh being conveened together with the reverend ministers of the place, in obedience to ane act of councill of the date the seventh current, the committee thereby appointed made report that they had mett with the ministers and laid the petitions mentioned in the said act before them, and that the said committee had in obedience to a consert of councill made offer to the saids ministers of three hundered merks Scots each yearly besides their stipends if they would undertake to preach in both churches of the burgh, which being considered by the councill they unanimously approve of the said offer, and the whole councill in one voice made the same offer again to the ministers, with this provision that the said three hundered merks be nowayes annext to their stipend furder than conform to a contract to be entered into betwixt the councill and the ministers upon their acceptance of the said offer, and desired their answer. To which they answered that the affair moved being of the last concern they could not give a particular answer to the said offer untill they had first laid the same before their presbetry and kirk session, and therefore the councill continue the receiving in of the said answer till this day month, and the whole of the saids petitions are instantly delivered up to the saids ministers for their furder consideration thereof till then.

14 December, 1730.

Anent preaching in both churches.

In obedience to ane act of councill of 16th November last, the ministers reproduced the petitions therein mentioned and represented that since that time they had laid the matter mentioned in the said act before their presbetry and kirk session, and the councill required their answer in terms of the act. To which Mr. Hamilton answered and declared he could not undertake or accept of what thereby offered him in regaird of his being ane old and infirm man, and understanding the voice of the toun and kirk session to be for a third minister, notwithstanding he is satisfied the councill would delay it if they thought fitt till the presbetry gave them a positive answer; and to which Mr. Muir answered and declared that tho' he were never so strong he did not see he could accept because the opinion of the session and the matter of the petitions were mostly for a third minister, yet notwithstanding, in regaird the presbetry att their last meeting were not full nor had given a positive answer, he desired a delay till the next presbetry for farder advice; which being considered by and putt to a vote in councill, viz.—proceed or delay,—it was carried by a great majority proceed; and accordingly they recommend to the magistrats, [and six others] or majority of them to meet on Wedensday next by four aclock in the afternoon to consider the saids petitions and to take the ministers opinions thereanent.

Set of the towns new house.

The councill, before proceeding to set the towns new house on the north side of the High Street, taking to their consideratione that it might be a considerable loss to the roup to set any part of the said house to any persone except who shall bind themselves not to work at any noisome work within or without the doors of the same, have therefore enacted that any persone who shall offer for any part of the said house shall be bound by tack to be expead betwixt the treasurer and them to the effect above mentioned, and ordains the said house with the office houses and pertinents to be instantly set for the space of five years after Whitsunday next to the highest offerers therefore, they alwise finding sufficient caution for payment of the rent, and being oblidged to uphold the whole glass windows of their possessione, and to keep clean their proportione of the stair and closs, under the pain of five pound Scots for each contraventione, and ordains each offerer to throw in half a crown with their bode. And the councill having accordingly proceeded to set the same house, they set the same as follows, viz.:—the first story of the said house, with the stables, brewhouse, and pertinents, to George Henderson, merchant, for £13 10 s. sterling; the westmost shop with the westmost apartment of the second storey, to Andrew Dickie, watchmaker, for £5 10 s. sterling; the eastmost shop and eastmost apartment of the third storey to James Alexander, merchant, for £5 10 s. sterling; and the shop immediately on the west of the closs and eastmost apartment of the second storey to James Dasone, merchant, for £8 5 s. sterling; all yearly rents. Set of the towns new house.

The magistrats and toun councill of the said burgh being conveened, the committee appointed by ane act of councill the twenty fifth of December last made report that according to the said appointment they had mett severall times and called severalls of the most judicious persons of the gildry, seven trades, maltmen, and other incorporations of the place, to their assistance in considering how a lasting fund should be provided for payment of a yearly stipend to a third minister to be called here, and that they had for that end inspected the toun treasurers accompts for severall years back, and had given it as their opinion that the said third ministers stipend should be twelve hundered merks Scots yearly payable out of the converted multure of the said burgh; and that notwithstanding by the act of thirle the whole inhabitants are undoubtedly thirled and astricted to the touns milns, and that the act of councill of the date the [19] day of [May 1681] converting the malt formerly Act anent a third minister.

exacted for multure into money,[1] and severall other acts and grants relating thereto, be sufficient of themselves, yet considering that the stipend to be payable to a third minister must be equally certain and undoubted as being lasting and perpetuall, the said committee gave it likewise as their opinion that for the more security the said converted multure should be perpetuatt att eighteen shilling and eight pennies Scots money for each boll of malt, being the rate it presently is att, which would not only obviat and prevent all pleas and controversies that might arise concerning, but would also establish and confirm a lasting fund for payment of, the said stipend, as well as for the other onerous causes for which the said multure was destined, with this condition that the inhabitants should be liberat and freed of ministers stipends, cess, and all other publick burdens except watching and warding and quartering of the military, and the outputting of persons of men to the militia: of which the saids magistrats and councill approved with this provision, that the gildry together with the haill incorporations of the place shall perpetuat the said converted multure att the rate it presently is; and for that end recommends to the dean of gild, deacon conveener, and deacons of the other incorporations in the place, to conveen their respective incorporations att their ordinar meeting places to morrow att any time they shall think fitt, except the gildry who are to be conveened att ten aclock on Thursday next, in order to have what above mentioned under their most serious consideration, and to make report accordingly.

Bridge guard.

Appoints the treasurer to pay to Robert Stirling, merchant, twenty four pound Scots as two years rent of a roome for the bridge guard furnished by him to the burgh and kept unset on their accompt from Whitsunday 1729 to Whitsunday next, aud appoints the treasurer to acquaint the said Robert not to keep the said roome unset on the towns accompt in time coming.

Relief be the councill to the whole communities.

The magistratts and councill taking to consideration that the seven incorporate trades, maltmen, mechannicks, omnigatherum, and barbers, by their acts of court the 13th current, and the gildry by their act of court the 14th current,[2] have, for the causes therein specified, thirled and astricted themselves and their successors, gildbrethren, trades, maltmen, mechannicks, omnigatherum, and barbers of the said burgh, to the common milns therof, called the Bridge and Borrow Milns, presently belonging thereto, and to such other milns as shall happen thereafter to belong thereto, and that they shall grind all the malt thereat to be hereafter brewen, sold, or consumed by them or any of them within this burgh or territories thereof, according to use and wont; and that they shall pay to the saids magistratts and councill, or their collector in their name, the present ordinar converted multure therefore, which is 18 s. 8 d. Scots money for each boll, and so in proportion for greater or lesser quantities, and that in all time coming; providing allwise that the said converted multure should be applyed for payment of the touns debts, second and third ministers stipends, and all other publick burdens and impositions except quartering of the military, watching and warding, and the out putting of persons of men to the militia. Therefore the saids magistratts and councill oblidge themselves and their successors that the forsaid 18 s. 8 d. of each boll of malt to be thereafter brewen, sold, or consumed by the saids communities, shall be applied for payment of the touns debts, second and third ministers stipends, schollmasters sallaries, drummers and pipers fialls, Kings cess, publict works of the burgh, and all other publick burdens and impositions whatsomever, imposed or to be imposed, except quartering of the military, watching and warding, and the out putting of persons and men to the militia. . . . And that so soon as the touns debts shall come to be paid off the saids communities shall have a reasonable diminution of the said present converted multure. And that each of the saids communities shall have a voice in calling of the said second and third ministers in all time coming. . . .

23 January, 1731.

The magistrats and toun councill of the said burgh being conveened, and considering that the whole communities of the place petitioned the saids magistrats and councill mentioning that there is not sufficient accommodation in the east church (which is now made use of for the publick worship of God) for a considerable part of the inhabitants of this burgh, and earnestly entreating the councill would fall on proper methods for removing and preventing the like greivance in time coming, and also considering that after mature deliberation on what above mentioned, together with the verdict of workmen (called to inspect the said east church if the same could be improven for accommodating the whole parishioners) declaring that such improvement was impossible and impracticable, it is found necessary that there should be a minister called for dispensing the ordiuances in the west church, and to take his proportional part of the ministeriall charge in the congregation in conjunction with the other two worthy ministers already setled therein, as shall be thought most for edification; the saids magistrats and councill do therefore hereby unanimously bind and oblidge them and their successors in office that the dean of gild and deacon conveener of the said burgh, and their successors in office, shall make due and thankfull payment, to any person to be setled here minister as aforesaid, of the sum of twelve hundred merks Scots money of yearly stipend; and the saids magistrats and councill, likewayes considering that it is necessary thir presents have the approbation of the very reverend the moderator and remanent members of the presbetry of Sterling, in respect the said west church is to be furthwith planted with seats, do therefore nominate and appoint the magistrats [and others] to wait on the said presbetry the 27th instant, and lay this act before them, earnestly desiring their approbation of the same.

20 February, 1731.

Mortification be provest Erskine.

There was produced in councill a mortification made and granted by Mr. John Erskine, provest of the burgh, in favours of the magistrats and toun councill thereof, wherein mention is made that William Danskine, chapman, being upon the fourth day of Aprile last received and admitted as a burges and gild brother of the said burgh, did pay his entry of two hundred pounds Scots money due to the gildry to Robert Watsone, the then gild treasurer, and his entry of thirty pound money foresaid due to the burgh to Andrew Muirhead, the then toun treasurer, both which sums are ordained to be payed in to the said Mr. John Erskine, as provost of the said burgh, conform to old custome, and whereby he, the said Mr. Erskine, mortifies and settles in the hands of the saids magistrats, councill, and toun treasurer, and their successors in office, the said sum of two hundred and thirty pound, that the yearly annualrent thereof may be applyed either for payment of the yearly stipend pro tanto payable to the minister who shall be called to officiat in the western church of this burgh, or as ane adition thereto, as the saids magistrats and councill shall think fitt.

10 April, 1731.

The councill, considering that they are frequently troubled with requeists for burying in the west church of this burgh without any gratification made on that account, do therefore declare and enact that in all time coming no such priviledge or liberty shall be granted or allowed to any person whatever without satisfying the councill therefore before ever the ground allowed to bury in be broken up.

26 June, 1731.

The magistrats and toun councill considering that, by the transportation of the reverend Mr. Ebenezer Erskine, minister of the gospell att Portmoak, from that parioch to this, the ordinances of God will now be dispenst in the west as well as the east church of this burgh, and that the said west church must now be plenished with seats, and that, for preventing any debate that might arise concerning any pretence of right the kirk session of the said burgh might make to the area or any part of the west church, the saids magistrats and councill had made the following proposall or overture to the session, viz., that the session should denude themselves in favours of the saids magistrats and councill of any right or interest the session might pretend to have to the foresaid area or any part of the said west church before ever the priviledge of erecting seats or lofts therein be granted to any person, and that the session had unanimously gon in to denude themselves as desired, and that the saids magistrats and councill had made ane offer of the foresaid area to the session for the sum of five hundred merks, and that they had accepted of that offer; therefore the saids magistrats and councill do unanimously grant, allocate, and appropriate to the said kirk session the foresaid area in the said west church as the same is presently measured out, to be by them filled and plenished with seats or dasks, to be disposed on by them for the use of their poor; with this provision allwise that the saids seats or dasks shall be removed att the dispensing of the sacrament of the Lords supper in the west church, or when any person having right to bury therein shall have occasion therefore, and that in all time coming.

N.B.—The reason why this act is not signed is because the session afterwards refused to pay the 500 merks therein mentioned, and so it is to have no force or effect.

Act confirming the gildrys loft in the west church.

The councill considering that the gildry of this burgh have, by their act of this day, agreed that a complement of five hundred merks be made by them to the saids magistrats and councill for helping to defray the extraordinary expence they have been and will be at in calling and settleing of one to be one of the ministers of this burgh and congregation, and in repairing the roof and windows of the west church, (wherein the ordinances of God are now to be dispensed as well as in the east church), and that under this provision that the councill should confirm to the gildry their loft in the eastmost end of the said west church; and likewise considering that the kirk session of this burgh and congregation have, by their act of this date for the reasons therein mentioned, denuded themselves of any pretence of right or interest they might have to any part of the said west church in favours of the councill; therefore, the saids magistrats and councill do hereby unanimously not only confirm any right or tittle the gildry may have or pretend to the foresaid loft, but also grant, allocate, and appropriate the samen loft to them and their successors, gild brethren of the said burgh, for their accommodation in hearing and seeing the ordinances of God dispensed in the said west church in all time coming.

Act for disposing on the west church.

The councill considering that, by the approaching settlement of a third minister in this congregation, the ordinances of God will be dispensed in the west as well as the east church of this burgh, and that for that end it is necessar the said west church should be planted and furnished with seats, and that the most comodious and advantagious way and maner for doing thereof will be by granting liberty to the parishioners to build and erect the same themselves upon their own proper charges; therefore, the councill do nominate and appoint provost Littlejon, [and others], to conveen themselves in the said west church upon Munday next, the twenty eight instant, be ten aclock forenoon, and there from that time till twelve aclock the said day to dispose on the said west church, as the same is presently measured and chalked out, by granting the liberty and priviledge of building and erecting seats or desks, pews and lofts, to such person or persons as shall offer most therefore in the terms and under the provisions and conditions all as hereafter sett doun: viz., Imprimis, that the seats and desks and pews to be built in the said church shall be removed and lifted when any persone having right to bury below the same shall have occasion therefore, upon such persons being oblidged to lift and sett doun the same again on their own proper charges. Item, that such priviledge of building and erecting of seats or desks, pews, and lofts, be granted to the purchasers and their assigneys during their interest and residence in the place only, and that for hearing and seeing the ordinances of God dispenst in the said west church. Item, that the purchasers be furthwith oblidged to build their seats or desks, pews and lofts, on their purchase, and that the pryce thereof be either paid att purchasing or security given therefore to the toun treasurer, payable betwixt and the term of Martinmess next. Item, that each purchaser give in to the clerk of dead earnest as follows, viz., one shilling starling for each seat or desk, two shillings and sixpence for each pew, and five shillings for each loft; and that each purchaser satisfie and pay the clerk for extracting the act of councill granting such priviledge. And it is declared that the area of the said west church now allocate and appropriate to the kirk session, and the loft in the east end thereof now allocate and appropriate to the gildry, and two pews chalked and measured out, the one thereof with a design to be given to the relict of the honourable collonell John Blackader, deputy governour of Sterling Castle, and the other to one of the ministers of this burgh, are excepted and not att all to be disposed of by the said committee. And appoints the presenter to make publick intimation hereof tomorrow from the letteron.

Act and commission anent unfree traders.

The councill considering that the gildry by their act the twelvth of February last had appointed a committee of their number to meet with the magistrats in order to consert proper methods for preventing unfree traders bringing up vessels with their goods to the toun shoar, who frequently do clandestinely convey and sell the same in the toun to the prejudice of the actuall entered merchants therein, and that accordingly the magistrats and committee had mett and had wrote to Mr. Irving, agent to the royall burrows, for his advice thereanent, and that his opinion, which is contained in the missive mentioned in the immediate preceeding act, was this, viz., that the unfree traders that are to be prosecute are such as export or import or deall in retaill of forreign commodities, and the touns district is the shyre of Sterling, and that the unfree traders that import forreign commodities their goods are seisable when apprehended within the priviledge of any royalty, and are to be confiscated one half to the crown and the other half to the burrow seiseing, which may be done by a process before the magistrats att the instance of any person who shall have a commission to make such a seisure; but that in case their goods are not apprehendable within a royalty, then that they are not seisable summarly, but that the remeady in that case is only a process att law; and the councill likewise considering that the said committee have given it as their opinion that the councill should appoint some understanding merchants for seiseing and apprehending such goods within the priviledge of this burgh, the saids magistrats and councill did and hereby do nominate and constitute William Danskine, James Patersone, William Wright, and John Finlaysone, merchants in this burgh, or any one of them, their commissioners for summarly seiseing and secureing the goods before mentioned exported or imported by unfree traders, where the same can be apprehended within this burgh, or the suburbs or appendicles thereto belonging, or within the ports or harbours thereof, to be applyed in terms of law; and ordains the whole gild brethren to be aiding and assisting to the saids commissioners in makeing such seisures when required by them thereto, and particularly the gild officer present and to come to give his aid, assistance, and attendance.

New tenement.

The councill considering how much the foir street is decorated by that new tenement built by William Allan, merchant, appoint James Alexander, toun treasurer, to give to John Miller, who was master meason to the said building, two guineas of drink money.

½ a guinea given to governour of Damascus.

The councill approve of James Alexander, toun treasurer, his having paid to John Erskine, late provost, six pound six shilling Scots which he in name of the burgh had given to Joseph Jammati, governour of Damascus, as their proportion of a certain sum that the burrows had condescended should be given him in charity.

21 October, 1732.

There was a petition given in to the councill from George Hendersone, John Finlaysone, James Alexander, and Andrew Dickie, tennants and possessors of the touns tenement or house on the north syde of the foir street, shewing that James Dawson, also tennant and possessor of a part of the said tenement, has sett his possession in the second storie thereof to (blank) Skinner, relict of Mr. James Hogg, doctor of medicine in Sterling, whose furniture is infected with bogs, and that if she were allowed to come to possess they would not only lose their furniture but also be pested and troubled with them in their persons, and likewise shewing the damnage the common good of the burgh might sustain thereby, and therefore craveing the said James Dawson might be discharged from either allowing the said Mrs. Hogg to enter to the foresaid possession, or to sett the same to any body else whose furniture is infected with the foresaid kind of vermine in time comeing, and the representants do show their willingness that the same restraint should be laid on them as to their possessions, as is more fully mentioned in the said petition; which being considered by the couucill, together with its being notour that some years ago one Drysdale and Mrs. Morrisone, both tennants in the house that Mrs. Hogg is now possest of, had their beds or other furniture burnt on account of their being infected with the foresaid kind of vermine while they were possest of the house, and with its being likewise notour that the said vermine were very reif in that part of the house which James Loutet, supervisor of excise, possest, during the whole time of his possession; the councill therefore do discharge the said James Dawson from either allowing the said Mrs. Hogg to enter to the foresaid possessiou or to sett the same to any body else whose furniture is infected or suspected to be infected with the foresaid kind of vermine in time comeing, and the haill other tennants and possessors of the said tenement from doing the like till once the councill be acquainted and satisfied therewith, each persone contraveening under the pain of ten pound starling by and attour being lyable to the councill for what damnage the touns house may sustain, and to the possessors thereof for what damnage they may sustain thereby.

Anent Mr. Erskine minister.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill of the said burgh being conveened, there were given into them petitions from the gildry, seven incorporate trades, and haill other corporations in the burgh, all declaring their greif for being likely to be deprived of the ministry of the reverand Mr. Ebenezer Erskine, their minister, in case the act of assembly in May last conserning him be putt to execution by the very reverand commission of the generall assembly, and therefore creaving the councill might use their indavours for preventing it; the councill have therefore appointed the magistrats, dean of gild, conveener, and treasurer, or majority of them, to draw up ane adress to the commission concerning the forsaid matter, betwixt and the next councill day.

4 August, 1733.

Act anent Mr. Erskine minister.

In pursuance of the councills act the second current, there was a scroll of a representation and address relateing to the affair therein mentioned, given in by the committee therein named, which after being read the councill unanimously approve of, and appoints William Maiben, preses of councill, to sign the same in their name, and nominats and appoints James Littlejon, present provost, or John Gibb, one of the present baillies, their commissioner to present and give in the same to the verry reverand commission of the generall assembly of the church of Scotland to meet at Edinburgh the second Wednesday of August instant, and of which representation and address the tenor follows, viz.:—

Unto the very reverend the moderator and reverend and honorabill members of the commission of the generall assembly of the church of Scotland, the representation and address of the provost, baillies, and toun councill of the burgh of Sterling, for ourselves and in name of the whole community thereof by us represented, humbly sheweth—

That there are petitions given in to us by the gildry, seven incorporate trades, and haill other corporations in the burgh, all declaring their greif for being likely to be deprived of the ministry of the reverand Mr. Ebenezer Erskine, one of our ministers, in case the act of assembly in May last concerning him be putt to execution by the very reverand commission, and therefore craving wee might use our endavours for preventing their being so deprived.

That as Mr. Erskines affair comes now before the very reverand commission in pursuance of ane act of assembly, so wee shall not here enquire into the reasons for inacting it, neather shall we much dipp into the questions how far the execution of the foresaid act of assembly might be delayed in point of form, but must humbly submitt this to the very reverand commission. Only, wee begg leave briefly to represent that Mr. Erskine was setled as ane additionall minister amongst us for the greater edification of the place, and that with no small trouble and expence; that we have alwise lived in good freindship with him after now two full years acquaintance; that wee find him to be a man of agreeable disposition of mind and of a religious walk and conversation, and to be every way fitted and qualified for discharging the office of the ministry amongst us, and that he has accordingly discharged the same to our great satisfaction; that therefore our being deprived of his ministeriall performances must undoubtedly be very moving and afflicting to us; and that the putting of the foresaid act to execution, wee are afraid, will in all likelyhood be attended with very lamentable circumstances, confusions, and disorders, too numerous and tedious to be here rehearst, and that not only in this place in particular but also in the church in generall.

The consideration of this, and that the very reverend commissions delaying the execution of the foresaid act cannot miss to be reckoned a piece of prudence and good conduct by the venerable assembly, as it tends to preserve the peace of the church as well as of this place and to prevent the disquite that otherwise might arise in both, makes us the more bold to apply and hopefull to succeed in our requeist for this end.

May it therefore please the very reverend commission to take up the premisses to consideration and delay the putting of the foresaid act of assembly to any executioun untill the nixt assembly, or at least till the commission in November nixt, and wee are hopefull the venerabill assembly will not condemn you for so doeing. This is our ernast and hearty prayer and address. Signed by William Maiben, precess of councill, in our name and by our appointment, att Sterling, the 4th day of August, 1733.

8 September, 1733.

Appoint James Alexander, toun treasurer, to furnish a gold ring to the chapmens race on Thursday next, at the rate of a guinea or thereby, but declare that the councils giving this compliment shall not inferr a preparative for giving the like in time coming. Gold ring to chapmens race.

The councill approve of James Alexander, toun treasurer, having paid out to James Ramsay, the toun's agent, twenty pound sterling per receipt to Accompt about the sherreifship.

Accompt about the sherreifship.

accompt of the charges of the plea anent the toun's right of sherreifship, and of the treasurer having given four guineas to Mr. Patrick Haldan of Bearcrofts when here, as one of the toun's lawyers in the said plea.

13 October, 1733.

Anent the clock and musick bells.

Anent the petition given into the councill by Andrew Dickie, watchmaker, shewing that notwithstanding the publick clock of this burgh does, he presumes, answer in every respect as was primarly designed att making thereof, yet it is most certain that it may be very much bettered, especially in playing the tunes, which by addition of three new bells, two new wheels, new barrell, new combar, a sett of new keys, and a sett of new clapers, it can be made so as to play every way with these they have gott in the toun of Edinburgh that is played with the hand, it can be heard att a far far greater distance than it is att present, be made to play vastly better to time and tune, and to observe every grace that is in the tune to as good advantage every way as the aforesaid bells that are played by the hand. And as the petitioner is sure he can make all the above advantage to it, he is willing, out of regaird to the good toun and not att all from a view of making a private advantage to himself, to undertake the doeing of all the above, and also to make the cover above the bells sufficiant, which att present is not, for the sum of thirty five pound starling, which the councill may easly judge is not near sufficiant for such a piece of workmanship where private advantage is studied; and this he offers to do with this speciall qualification, that he shall not demand one farding of the money till the premises are performed as the petition bears. The saids magistrats and councill having maturely considered the said petition, they grant the desire thereof and appoint James Stivenson, toun treasurer, to enter into contract with the said Andrew Dickie for performance of the foresaid undertaking and payment of the pryce att the finishing thereof in the preceise terms of the foresaid petition.

3 November, 1733.

Anent Mr. Ebenezer Erskine.

The councill considering that the affair concerning Mr. Ebenezer Erskine, their minister, comes before the commission of the kirk on Wednesday nixt come eight dayes, the fourteenth of November current, they therefore appoint provost Wingate, baillie Millar and baillie Alexander, or any two of them, to go alongst with and attend the said Mr. Erskine att the said commission, and the councill declare they will approve of their charges and appoint payment thereof. Anent Mr. Ebenezer Erskine.

15 December, 1733.

The clerk produced a letter he had from James Ramsay, the touns agent, concerning the touns right of sherreifship, with a coppy of a concert framed by the sherreif for keeping up good correspondence, as he pretends, betwixt him and the toun, both which were read; and the councill finding that the sherreif thereby resolves to pretend and insist for a cumulative jurisdiction with them within burgh, they therefore unanimously appoint the process already intented before the lords of councill and session against the sherreif to be carried on with all expedition, and appoints the clerk to write this to Mr. Ramsay first post. Anent the sherreifship.

2 February, 1734.

Appoints the treasurer to cause repair that part of Marrs work yaird now sett in tack to the burgh where the same has fallen down by the late storm, and that in the west and north dykes thereof. Act for repairing Marrs work yaird.

7 March, 1734.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill, being informed that many members of parliament intend to bring in a bill to the house of commons for restoreing to the nation trienniall parliaments, the councill have signed and sent a missive to my lord Erskine, their representative in parliament, to concurr and insist for the same. Missive to lord Erskine; triennial parliaments.

4 May, 1734.

The councill considering that in obedience to their act the fifteenth of September last, Walter Craig, coppersmith, furnished a candlestick to the west church which they judge to be worth seven pound two shillings and six pence starling, being the sum he ingaged for as the price of a seat purchast by him in the said church, and therefore they appointed the treasurer to deliver up to the said Walter the bill he granted for the said sum, which was instantly done in face of the councill. Walter Craigs bill; candlestick to west church.

29 June, 1734.

Appoints as many of the fire buckets to be repaired into a sufficient Fire buckets.

condition as will mend, and as many more new ones to be made as will make up the number of four dozen in whole.

3 August, 1734.

Steeple of St. Ninians.

The councill appoint the treasurer to pay eight pound Scots as the touns proportion out of the lands of Bennies croft and Bizet lands for rebuilding the steeple of St. Ninians.

12 August, 1734.

Grant to William Christie; toun wall.

Anent the petition given to the councill by William Christie, merchant and dyster in Sterling, mentioning that he having purchast from Mr. Duncan Bachop, doctor of medicine there, that yaird lying on the east side of the toun wall near to the Burrows-gate, found that it would render the purchas more commodious and advantagious to him were he allowed to strike ane entry thereto throw the said wall by one of the old gun ports, which would not in the least prejudge the wall, and having had the opportunity of the councill or att least a goodly part of their number sometime ago to visite and sight the said place of the wall where the said William designed the entry might be made throw, he apprehended that they seemed to aggree that the wall would not be thereby prejudged, and that liberty for making the entry would be granted upon application to the councill, and therefore craving they might take the premisses to consideration and allow the said William to strike throw ane entry in the manner above represented; which petition having been considered they grant the desire thereof and allow the said William to strick throw ane entry to his yaird as craved, with this provision that whenever the councill shall find it necessar they may close up the entry att pleasure.

26 November, 1734.

Committee to defend two actions.

The councill, considering that it would be very troublesome and uneasie to be calling councills from time to time as occasion may offer concerning the plea intented before the lords of councill and session for reduction of the late election of the magistrats and councill, and the advocation raised of the action att the fiscalls instance against severalls for the late disturbance and abuse on the Kings birth night, so far as the magistrats are concerned, do therefore authorise and empower the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener, or any one of them, to act and do in defence of the whole throughout the whole steps of these pleas as fully as if the authority of the councill were had thereto from time to time.

Committee to defend two actions.

19 December, 1734.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill, have signed a petition to the honorabill the commons of Great Brittain in parliament, representing the injustice and illegality of the late return of captain Peter Halkett, younger of Pitfirren, as representative or member for the district of burrows to which this belongs, when the honorabill James Erskine of Grange, advocat, was the legall elected representative and member and ought to have been returned as such, and therefore creaving the honorabill house of commons might seriously consider the matter and affoord releif therein.

Anent the return of a member of parliament.

1 February, 1735.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill, considering that they have no great occasion for a publick writing master and teacher of arithmetick in the grammar schooll of this burgh, and that therefore the sallary payable to Mr. David Young, the present writing master and teacher of arithmetick, is ane unnecessary burden on the burgh, they do therefore drop the said station in the schooll in all time after Candlemass next, and discharge the said Mr. David from his said office.

Act discharging the writing master.

3 May, 1735.

Appoints the treasurer to furnish and provide a new drum for the burgh, the old one being at present useless.

New drum.

9 July, 1735.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill, considering the great expence the common good of the burgh have been putt to in defence of the criminall pursuit lately against the persons that were on duty on the guard on the Kings birth day in October last, and against the magistrats themselves, and that, seeing the guard are dismist simpliciter from the said process, it is a hardship the burgh should be burdened with the said expence without releif therefore off the prosecutors of the said action, the councill do therefore appoint the opinions of the gildry, seven trades, and haill other communities in the place, to be taken whither or not the indictment or criminall lyble att

Anent a criminall prosecution.

the magistrats instance against the foresaids prosecutors and the other persons therein named shall be prosecute so as that they may obtain satisfaction, and particularly payment of the charges already laid out or that may be laid out in the matter.

15 July, 1735.

Writing, &c., master.

The provost, bailies, and toun councill, nominat appoint and install Adam Stewart, writing master in Glasgow, sole writing master and teacher of English and arithmetick in the grammar schooll of this burgh during their pleasure, and allow him the yearly sallary of £180 Scots.

4 August, 1735.

The honourable James Erskine his entry quitt.

The provost, baillies, and toun councill, considering the many good services done to the burgh by the honourable James Erskine of Grange, advocate, in his signall appearance for the magistrats and severalls of the inhabitants in the civill and criminall processes latly depending, without receiving any fee, reward, or other remuneration, and in others the concerns of the toun as he has had occasion, and of his known and steady adherence to the intrest thereof, the councill therefore and in remuneration thereof receive and admitt the said honourable James Erskine to the liberty and freedom of a burges and neighbour qua gild brother of this burgh, who being present made faith as use is; and his entry payable to the burgh, being thirty pound Scots, the councill compliment him therewith.

30 August, 1735.

£12 Scots to the burlamen and constables.

Appoints the treasurer to give to John Blair, Archibald Campbell, John Andersone, and William Thomsone, burlamen in the Craigs, and the constables who warned them, twelve pound Scots amongst them for their labour and trouble anent the highways of late.

£18 Scots to baillie Chrystie.

Appoints the treasurer to give to Hairy Christie, chyrurgeon and late baillie, eighteen pound Scots for medicines furnished by him and his pains and trouble in the cureing and attending upon two of the quarriers that were ill wounded and hurt in the setting down of the touns well in the Backraw.

6 September, 1735.

Discharge of reduction of late annuall election.

The councill having considered the following discharge of the late process intented against the magistrates and councill, and having also considered how grievously this burgh and the far greatest part of the honest and worthy burgesses and inhabitants thereof were opprest, and the great expence and trouble they were put to by groundless and most unjust pursuits before the court of justiciary, in one of which, that seemed to show what would be the event of the rest, they prevailed by the verdict of an assize; and considering likeways that altho' due resentment of the injurious usage they met with, and hopes of recovering just satisfaction of their damnages and costs from the courts of justice, and if need was from the high court of parliament, might have prompted to proceed in discussing all the processes, civill and criminall, intented hinc inde; yet on the other hand, considering also that it was most desireable to establish as soon as possible peace and tranquility in the burgh itself, in order to reclaim some few of the misled burgesses and inhabitants and to bring them to a sense of their duety, and to prosecute the same henceforth and the common advantage of the burgh rather than any other project whatever; therefore the saids magistrates and councill do hereby accept of the said discharge, and approve of putting to an immediat end the other processes foresaid. And they do on this single occasion warn all their brethren burges henceforth to abstain from and beware of all such factious and sinistruous ways, by whomsoever they may be instigated thereto, and on whatever pretenses or vows, and that minding the reall and true advantadge of the burgh and kingdome they would in all affairs act as become men who have the same at heart above all things. Follows the discharge:—Be it known to all men by these presents, us William Allan, late dean of gild, [and six others]: Forasmuch as there was a process of reduction raised and which is presently depending before the lords of council and session against [the present magistrates and council of Stirling for reducing and declaring their election void], and wee considering the great uncertainty of success in such processes, and how much keeping law suits contributs to creat division and mischeif in the burgh to the great hurt of the same; therefore and for certaine other good causes and considerations witt ye us to have exonered and discharged the said Robert Wingate, present provost, and haill other present magistrates, councill, and deacons of crafts above named, of the foresaid process of reduction against them, and the said process itself with all that has followed or may follow upon the premisses.

Discharge of reduction of late annuall election.

6 November, 1735.

Appoints the treasurer to give to Duncan M'Lauchlen, grave maker, six £6 to the grave maker.

£6 to the grave maker.

pound Scots money for his pains and trouble in putting on the magistrats carpet and taking care of their books in the church of late.

Petition from the weavers.

There being a petition presented from the weavers representing their trade to be much decayed by the reason of great quantities of insufficient yairn, particularly from the south country, being brought into this place and country round it, and craving the same might be recomended to be laid before the gildry that the like grievance may be prevented in time coming, the councill therefore recomend to the dean of gild to lay the subject matter of the petition before the gildry att their first meeting.

20 December, 1735.

Thorns and briers of the Back brae.

The councill, as patrons of the Neather Hospitall, considering that the Back brae is mostly grown over with thorns and briers, and that the pasturage therein is become of very litle value, they do therefore appoint the masters furthwith to cause hole out the same.

3 January, 1736.

Passing of carts with heavy carriadges alongst the bridge.

The councill having considered that the bridge on the water of Forth is much damnified by carts being allowed to go or pass alongst it with heavy carriadges, they therefore discharge and prohibit the going or passing of any carts with heavy carriadges alongst the said bridge in all time coming, and for that end appoint that such carriadges be taken off the carts before they come upon the bridge and be rolled from the one end to the other, and that the customers att the bridge see to the observance of this act: for which end they are hereby impowered and authorized to stop the going or passing of such carts alongst the said bridge till once the carriadges be taken off them.

25 February, 1736.

Act and grant in favours of the mechanicks.

Anent the petition and representation given in by John Millar, present deacon or overseer to the society or incorporation of mechanicks within this burgh, for himself and in name and behalf of the haill remanent members of the said society, shewing that the said society or incorporation of mechanicks did consider that for some considerable time past they have been oblidged, for the necessitous and clamant conditione of their poor, who have of late very much encreased, not only to give out in supplee to them their whole yearly income but even to take part of their principall stock for that end, by which the said society or incorporation may in a little time, or in a very few years, be rendered intirely incapable of supporting their own poor, and that by this they will be necessarly burdensome to the community of the burgh and revenue thereof, [the council allow the incorporation to augment their entries and dues] as follows, viz., the entry of each stranger to £24 Scots, of each journeyman to £2 Scots, besides the clerks dues and the dues of the trade hitherto in use to have been exacted. And statute, enact, and ordaine, that in all time coming it shall not be in the power of the said society or incorporation of mechanicks upon any pretence whatever to enter or receive into their society any persone professing either of the arts or callings of meason, wright, couper, dyer, or slater, whereof the said society of mechannicks are made up, unless he be capable to give into the society a sufficient sey for evidencing his knowledge in his profession, and do actually give in the same to the satisfaction and approbation of the deacon of the said society of mechannicks and the master for the time of that particular art or calling that the person creaving to be entred professes, and of such others of that art or calling as shall be chosen for that end by the mechannicks in a generall court under the designation of inspectors and sey masters . . .

Act and grant in favours of the mechanicks.

24 July, 1736.

The councill considering that the town officers, when they are ordered to warn bagage horses, and to go otherways about their duty in behalf of the magistrats and councill, do frequently drink too much in regaird they have not been hitherto limited, which becomes an unnecessary expence on the revenew of the burgh, they do therefore appoint John Cowan, town treasurer, to cause provide thirty quart, ten pint, and ten chopin tickets, to be given the officers from time to time as they are ordered to do their duty on behalf of the town, and according to the trouble they are at therein the drink to be in proportion in time coming; and declare that they will allow no furder of their spending at the foresaid occasions than the furnisher of the drink shall have tickets for.

Anent the town officers tickets.

7 August, 1736.

Appoints the treasurer to pay to William Danskine, merchant, ane accompt of two pound ten shillings and one penny starling money, for a suit of cloaths furnished by him at the magistrats desire to William Paterson, procurator fiscall of the burgh.

Suit of cloaths to the fiscall.

Widows of unfreemen keeping change houses.

The councill considering that there are a great many widows who keep change houses in this place albeit their husbands were not burgesses thereof, and that without any consideration made by them to the revenew of the burgh on that account, they do therefore statute and enact that in all time coming there shall be paid by each of the saids widows, into the collector of the converted multure for behoof of the burgh, the sum of four pound Scots yearly for the foresaid priviledge and liberty of keeping change houses, and that per advance, so that those presently enjoying that priviledge and liberty are to pay in each the said sum instantly for the year from Lambass last till Lambass next, and those who shall hereafter desire to be allowed the same priveledge and liberty are to pay in each the like sum when they be allowed, and that for the year immediatly to run thereafter.

24 August, 1736.

Act anent lamps.

The councill having considered proposalls given into them for furnishing the town with lamps for the streets by James Urquhart, coppersmith, they appoint the magistrats, dean of gild, conveener, and treasurer, or majority of them, to go thorough the town in order to see how many lamps will be necessar for lighting the same, and what may be the proper places for fixing them at; and the provost declares he will give the entry money of the first gild brother that happens to be admitted during his being provost for defraying the expence of the lamps, the said first entry money being properly due to himself as provost conform to old custome; and the councill continue the consideration of the price the said James Urquhart proposes to furnish each lamp for till the next councill day, till the above committee report their dilligence.

22 September, 1736.

Actapproving ane accompt.

The councill approve of a particular accompt of fourty one pound and six pennies Scots paid out by John Cowan, town treasurer, for hangings to the councill house windows.

4 Oetober, 1736.

Cows to be keept in the Hospitall park.

Anent the petition given into the councill by William Edmondston, Cambuswallace, and others, shewing that the Neather Hospitall park for some years past has been keept and sett apart for grassing the milk cows belonging to the inhabitants of this burgh, and that there has been a very good and laudable custom hitherto observed not to allow above twenty eight cows to be put therein yearly, that the park might not be overstockt and the cattle therein starved, the above number being sufficient to eat up the grass thereof and clear the rent which has been of very great use and service to the inhabitants; and therefore and in order to prevent for the future any greater number of cows to be put in the said park than twenty eight, and for preserving the grass thereof in winter, creaving to the effect underwritten: the magistrats and councill as patrons of the said hospitall having considered the said petition, they do statute, enact, and ordaine, that the milk cows to be grassed yearly in the foresaid park shall not exceed twenty eight in number in time coming, and do discharge all persons whatever from putting any other horse, cows, or other cattle, within the foresaid park during the winter season or at any other time of the year.

Cows to be keept in the Hospitall park.

6 November, 1736.

The councill approve of the following particular accompts spent in the councill house preceeding Michaelmass last, viz., of one at entertaining his grace the duke of Hamiltone of 52 pound 14 shilling, of another at solemnizing his Majesty's birth day of 236 pound 14 shilling, of another at entertaining some ladies of 47 pound 10 shilling, of another at solemnizing the Prince of Wales's marriage of 32 pound 19 shilling, of another at entertaining the lords of justiciary, of 30 pound 13 shilling, and of another at entertaining Mr. John Mayne, merchant in Lisbon, of 41 pound 14 shilling, all Scots money.

Act approving accompts.

5 February, 1737.

Appoints the treasurer to give to William Maiben, post master, one pound six shillings starling for his furnishing the toun in the three Edinburgh Currants weekly, from the twenty eight of July 1735 till the twenty eight of July 1736; but they discharge the furnishing of these Currants in time coming, and declare they will give no allowance therefore.

£1 6s. starling for Edinburgh Currants.

The councill considering that by the death of the late worthy Mr. Charles Moor, one of their ministers, the collegiat charge of this congregation is so far vacant, and being desireous to have a hearing of young men in order to the supplying of that vacancy, the applying for which to the presbitry they throw mistake omitted upon the presbitry day, Wednsday last, they therefore recomend to the magistrats, dean of gild, conveener, and treasurer, or majority of them, in conjunction with a committee of the kirk session, to meet this afternoon and to write a letter to the moderator of the presbitry desiring that he would conveen the presbitry here against Wednsday first, in order that the said conjunct comittee of councill and kirk session may then apply to them for a hearing of young men in order to the supplying the foresaid vacancy.

26 March, 1737.

Act for fire ladders.

The councill considering that when accidentall fire breaks out in the town proper ladders for the workmen that are assisting in extinguishing the same are not easily and readily got, whereby the flame encreases and the greater damage is done, they therefore appoint Patrick Stivenson, younger, town treasurer, to furnish and provide two long ladders and two short ones for the publick use of the burgh on such occasion, and appoint one of the long ones and one of the short ones to be keeped in the foir tolbooth, and the remaining two to be keept in the meall mercat, that there may be ready access to them in all time coming when fire happens within the burgh; and the councill discharge these ladders to be taken out of these places att any time or for any cause whatever except that of fire.

9 April, 1737.

Doors in west church.

It being represented in councill that the persons who have seats in the area of the west church do not at all get ready or easie access into their seats at the time appointed for divine worship, by reasone of people crouding in to the entries on both sides of the pulpite range before the service begin, or these persons who have the entries to their seats these ways can get into the same, the councill therefore and for preventing the like complaint in time coming appoint Patrick Stivensone, younger, toun treasurer, to cause furnish and provide a door to each side of the said pulpite range; and the same being done they allow the proprietors and possessors of the seats in the said area, who have their entrys thereto by the sides of the said pulpite range, to keep these doors closs each dyet of divine service till the first psalme be sung, providing they sett open the same so soon as the first prayer beginns, in all time coming.

Spendings at going the marches.

It being proposed in councill that none of the touns revenew should be spent at going the marches in time coming, as the magistrats have hitherto been in use to do after their dinner with the dean of gild and such as are invited by them to dine on that occasion, in regaird it was ane unnecessary burden on the toun; and this matter being reasoned upon and put to the vote, it was carried by the majority of nine to six that the magistrats and dean of gild might spend of the touns revenew at the forsaid occasion as formerly, in regaird the going of the marches was purely on the touns account, and therefore the councill allow them to do the same in time coming.

Spendings at going the marches.

25 June, 1737.

Mr. Ramsay, the touns agent, returned the touns precept of seasine granted be King Charles the First, dated the seventeenth day of November 1641, following upon their chartour of confirmation of that date, together with the touns instrument of seasine following upon the said precept, and another chartour of confirmation of the touns rights and priviledges granted by King Charles the Second, of the date the 22 of Aprile 1678, which had been sent in to the said Mr. Ramsay on account of the plea depending before the lords as to the touns right of sherreifship, and which are now laid up by the dean of gild and conveener in the chartour house.

12 July, 1737.

The councill considering that it is very necessary that a common washing house be built at St. Ninians well for the use of the inhabitants, and having seen a plan thereof they agree that the house be built according to that plan, and appoint the same to be shown by the treasurer to Robert Henderson, John Millar, John Dollar, and John Anderson, measons, in order to know which of them will undertake the work chapest; and however of them shall so undertake they appoint the treasurer furthwith to cause him do the same.

Act for a washing honse at St. Ninians well.

23 July, 1737.

Appoints the treasurer to furnish and provide six pair of blankets and six single sheets to the souldiers hospitall.

Anent the souldiers hospitall.

The councill resuming the consideration of their act the twelth currant anent a washing house, they agree that instead of pending betwixt the pillars thereof there be dormonts cast over from pillar to pillar for resting the roof upon, and appoint the treasurer to agree with Robert Henderson, the meason who drew the plan, for the meason work as chape as he can.

Anent a washing house.

6 August, 1737.

Manuscript of the Lords prayer and the apossles creed, &c.

John Sloass, writing master in the grammer school, made a present to the councill of the Ten Commands, the Lords Prayer, and the Apossles Creed, wrote on a sheet of peaper with a fine hand and in a very curious manner, and the councill on this account appoint the treasurer to give to the said John Sloass twenty five pound four shilling Scots, and furder appoint the treasurer to cause putt the forsaid manuscript into a frame with croun glass to be hung up in the new councill house.

8 August, 1737.

Act for roome reparation.

Appoints the treasurer to cause plaister the room and closet above the new councill house, and that in the rooff and in the walls so far as necessary, that they may be fitted for keeping the town's rights and charters; and furder appoints the said treasurer to cause put up a closs broad in the gavell window above these rooms for preventing any rain or storm comeing in.

Act installing touns carrier.

The councill considering a petition given in to them by David Cassells, carrier in Cumbernald, whereby he offers himself willing to serve this burgh as their publick carrier betwixt this and Edinburgh, and for this end always to keep four good and sufficient horses, and more if the necessity of the toun requires it, and to find the beall aftermentioned for his fidelity, they therefore appoint and install the said David Cassills public carrier in this burgh to and from Edinburgh, and that from and after Martinmass nixt during the councill present and to come their pleasure, and allow him the yearly sellary of fourty eight pound Scots money, [he being bound to find bail or caution and to reside in the burgh]; and appoint the treasurer to furnish him with the touns badge as carrier at his entry. And the said David being called in and this intimate to him he declared himself satisfied therewith, and accordingly he hereby willingly enacts and oblidges himself to keep the foresaid horses and to find the foresaid beall and come to and reside in this place, as before mentioned. Act installing touns carrier.

The councill having considered a petition given in by James Watson, junior, merchant, craving the liberty of a saw pitt to be made at the shoar for sawing of logs, they recommend to the magistrats, dean of gild, conveener, and treasurer, or majority of them, to visite the shoar this afternoon and consider if a saw pitt can be had there without prejudice; as also to visite the miln dambs and to report the sufficiency or insufficiency thereof alongst with their opinion as to the saw pitt next dyet of councill. Anent a saw pitt and the miln dambs.

5 November, 1737.

The councill having considered a petition given into them by John Finlayson, weaver, shewing that he has a boy of a very bright genius for learning but has not wherewith to put him to school by reason of poverty, and therefore creaving the councill would put him to school, the councill therefore appoint the said boy to be put to the grammar school, and the town treasurer to pay the expence of his schooling for the first quarter of a year, and the Neather Hospitall masters for the next. Schooling a son of John Finlaysone.

The councill appoint William Bowie, flesher, and John Livingston, town drummer, to light the lamps for the ensuing winter season, and appoints the treasurer to give twelve pound Scots to each of them for their trouble. Lighting the lamps.

10 December, 1737.

Appoints the treasurer to give to David Caw, nottar, three pound Scots £3 to a nottar.

£3 to a nottar. for subscribing as nottar for severalls of the omnigathrum, who could not write, to a representation given in by them to the town councill in December 1734, concerning a reduction then intended of the preceeding annuall election of the magistrats and town councill.

Coalls to a prisoner. Appoints the treasurer to cause furnish Janet Connochie, prisoner, with a load of small coalls each fourtnight during this winter season, in respect she has a young child in prison with her.

11 February, 1738.

Anent fire poles and buckets. The councill considering that when accidentall fire happens in the town the same might be the easier smuthered and extinguished if fire pole axes were furnished and provided for that end, whereby the rooffes and other parts of the houses and others that happen to be in flame could be cut down and confined within the walls, and the neighbourhood would be thereby in less danger of the fire, they therefore appoint the treasurer to furnish and provide six fire pole axes to be keept for the publick use of the burgh; and furder they recomend to the dean of gild and conveener to sight the town's fire buckets, and to cause the same be repaired so far as insufficient.

20 February, 1738.

Anent Mr. Ebenezer Erskine. The magistrats and town councill being conveened, and considering that there is a process to be carried on against the reverend Mr. Ebenezer Erskine, their only minister for the time, before the very reverend the provinciall synod of Perth and Sterling to meet att Perth tomorrow, the twenty first currant, and being aprehensive that the intent of that process is to deprive this town and congregation of the said Mr. Ebenezer Erskine's ministry, they therefore appoint Andrew Mershall and John Jaffray, baillies, [and three others], to go to Perth and give Mr. Erskine what countenance and assistance they can in the foresaid process.

18 March, 1738.

Alms house. The councill, as patrons of the Neather Hospitall, appoint the masters to cause instantly repair the alms house which lately fell down, conform to an estimat instantly produced and given back to them.

Contract and agreement with country shoemakers. The councill had produced and read to them a contract and agreement entered into betwixt the incorporation of cordners in this burgh and the country shoemakers of the date the tenth day of March last, whereby amongst other things the particular time allowed the country shoemakers to sett and keep up their flakes and stands aud to sell and expose their shoes to sale each weekly market day of this burgh is ascertained to be from ten aclock foirnoon till two aclock afternoon, and the councill having considered the said contract and agreement they ratifie and approve thereof in the heall heads, articles, and clauses of the same, and interpone their authority thereto and appoint the same to be inviolably observed in all time comeing.

Contract and agreement with country shoemakers.

1 April, 1738.

The councill considering that of the swords used by the town officers at publick parades there are only two belonging to the burgh, and that these two are very insufficient, they have therefore agreed that the officers be furnished and provided with new swords mounted with brass handles, to be worn by them on all publick occasions in time comeing; and having had a broad sword with the foresaid mounting showen them in councill by Walter Allan, armourer, they agree that he make other three swords of the same kind and goodness with the one now shown, and that the price of the whole four be six pound starling.

New swords to the officers.

6 May, 1738.

The councill considering that John Sloass, writeing master in the grammar school, has this day made a present to the town of an alphabet of all the hands in Great Brittain curiously wrot, they therefore appoint the treasurer to give to the said John Sloass twenty five pound four shilling Scots money, and appoint the treasurer to cause put the foresaid alphabet in a frame to be hung up in the councill house.

Two guineas to writeing master.

The councill considering that the largest bell in the church has been for sometime rent, and that it is necessar the same be founded of new, and that it is advised that it may be done as well and cheaper att Londone than any where else, they therefore appoint John Jaffray, baillie, to send the said bell to London to Mr. Claud Johnston, factor there, the said baillies correspondent, in order that he may get the same founded of new.

Founding of new one of the bells.

23 September, 1738.

The honourable Mr. Erskine of Grange represented that the act of council for the right manageing and improveing of the common good and revenews of the town and hospitalls of the date the third of August 1695, being what every burges of the town was nearly concerned in ought to be printed that each of them might have a double thereof for their better remembrance of the same, and that to contribute to so good a designe he himself would be at the expence of provideing five hundered printed coppies, and would transmitt them to the clerk to be destribute, provideing he were furnished with an extract of the said act for that end; and the council having considered this generous offerr of the said Mr. Erskine, they returned him thanks for the same, and appoint the clerk to furnish him with an extract of the said act when called for.

[The act of 1695 here referred to narrates that "by severall acts of parliament, and particularlie by the 36 act of the 3d parliament of King James the 4, and by the 181 act 13 parliament King James the 6, it is expresslie statute and ordained that the comone good of all burrowes should be layed out and imployed yeerlie for the necessities and advantages of the wholl communitie; and that it is just and reasonable that the wholl inhabitants and burgesses ought to be weell informed and satisfied as to the manadgeing and employeing of the comone good and revenues of the burgh wherin they are concerned"; that this burgh is prejudiced by the auditors of the town's and hospital's accounts being chosen either out of the members of council or by them; that it is a rule of well-governed burghs (but violated in Stirling) that none concerned in the magistrates and council should have tack of the town's revenues; and that there is "ane unparaleled custome and practise lately introduced and obtruded upon this burgh wherby the magistrates and council for the time did grant to their provost ane yearlie sallarie of ane thousand merks Scotes by and attoure allowance of his charges otherways." The magistrates and council, being resolved to reform these abuses, enacted that in future no member of council should be allowed any salary, pension, or gratuity out of the town or hospital's common good, nor take any of their mills, lands, or revenues; that neither provosts nor bailies should be auditors of the accounts, but that, in addition to the ordinary number of auditors chosen by the town council, two merchants should be chosen by the guildry and two tradesmen by the incorporated trades; that the auditors should have the exclusive power to approve or reject the accounts as they see cause; that the burgesses should be entitled to inspect the accounts and state objections during the auditing; and that members of council should, at their election, be sworn to observe these rules in all time coming.]

18 November, 1738.

Frocks to the lamp lighters.

Appoints Thomas Glen, town treasurer, to furnish and provide as much twiling as will be two frocks, viz., one to Robert Burn, weaver, and another to John Livingstone, town drummer, for wearing when they light the town's lamps.

30 December, 1738.

In pursuance of the act the twenty third of September last, the honourable Mr. Erskine of Grange produced in council five hundered printed coppies of the act of council for the right manageing of the common good and revenews of the town and hospitalls, of the date the third of August 1695, and made a present thereof to the council for the purpose mentioned in the said former act, for which the council returned him their most hearty thanks, and each of the council being just now furnished with a coppy of the said printed act they appoint the rest of the coppies to ly in the clerk's hands to be given out by him to the burgesses who shall desire the same.

Printed coppies of the act 1695 to be destribute.

The council having considered a petition given in by the managers of the royall infirmory of Edinburgh creaving the council's help, and that they might authorize and promote a contribution within their liberties for carrying on so pious and charitable a work as is intended by the said managers, the council therefore appoint the town treasurer to give to the managers twenty pound starling, and appoint the baillies to go through their severall quarters of the town, the fourth week of January next, and collect a voluntar contribution from the inhabitants towards the helping to carry on the foresaid pious and charitable work.

Contribution to the Edinburgh royall infirmory.

29*th January*, 1739.

The council considering the extraordinar damnage done to the town's steeple and the rooffs of the kirk, grammar school, and tolbuith, by the late storm, they appoint the treasurer to cause repair the same into a sufficient condition, and to employ propper persons for this end.

Act for some reparations.

3 February, 1739.

The baillies made report that in obedience to the act the thirtieth of December last, they had gone through their severall quarters of the town and had collected a voluntary contribution from the inhabitants for the royall infirmory of Edinburgh, and that this contribution extends to the sum of thirty five pound six shillings and four pence starling money; which sum the council appoint them to transmit to the managers of the infirmory sometime next week.

Royall infirmory.

Anent the poor and persons wanting certificats.

The council considering that the town is much opprest with poor not belonging to the place, and that the reall poor of the place might be better provided than they are were these extraneous poor keept out from among them and properer methods taken thereanent than hitherto has been done, the councill therefore appoint John Lowrie, quartermaster, and Robert Napier, glover, alongst with any of the town officers, to go through the town sometime next week and take up an exact list of the whole poor in the place and to enquire how long they have resided therein, and to make report thereof against the next diet of council, that they may fall on a proper method not only for the inhabitants being more eased but also for the poor themselves being better provided than formerly. As also the council considering that a great many of the inhabitants and landlords in the place do sett houses to persons wanting certificats of their good and honest behaviour, which tends evidently to the dishonour of the place as well as to the danger of the inhabitants goods therein, the councill therefore appoint the said John Lowrie and Robert Napier, when they take up the foresaid list of the poor, also to take up an exact list of the foresaid persons in the town who wants certificats, and of the persons and landlords who sett them houses, and to make report likeways as above.

3 March, 1739.

Repairing clock and musick bells.

The councill having considered a representation given in by Robert Melvine, keeper of the towns clock, shewing that there are many insufficiencies about the clock and musick bells by reason of roust and otherways, and that the same ought to be rectified, and that instead of iron weirs, which are continually in disorder by roust, their should be brass weirs furnished to the bells, and that the hammers and springs should be cleaned and coloured with oyl, they appoint the said Robert Melvine to repair the foresaid insufficiencies and furnish the brass weir.

Anent the poor.

In obedience to the act the third of February last anent the poor and persons wanting certificats, John Lowrie, quartermaster, and Robert Napier, glover, gave in a list of the poor of the place, and of the persons wanting certificats, and of their landlords, and the councill appoint the said John Lowrie and Robert Napier to go through the town again and try what the inhabitants will willingly contribute and give towards the maintainance of the poor of the place in order to prevent their being troubled with these begging at their houses, and to make report against next councill day. Anent the poor.

19*th June*, 1739.

Appoints the town treasurer to cause make two doors for the kirk steeple to prevent boys getting into the same, and to cause repair the kirk yaird dike so far as fallen down or insufficient. Steeple and kirk yaird dike.

The council considering the invidiousness of the pleas carried on before the court of session by John Miller, meason, Edward Mayne, and Alexander Gillchrist, merchants, and John Ballfour, flesher, against three of the magistrats upon the act of parliament anent wrongous imprisonment, and that after the outmost pains taken upon the persons beforenamed and frequent fair offers made to them on the part of the magistrats to have the forsaid pleas taken away in an amicable and friendly way, yet these persons are not only obstinate in refuseing to comply therewith but are stirred up and abetted in their carrying on of the forsaid pleas by severall others, who in such a case cannot be thought either to have the peace or real interest of the pleace at heart; and the councill considering that in all such litigious and invidious pleas or processes not only the just respect due to the magistracy but likewise the honour of the burgh is contemned and struck at, so that it is highly reasonable that both these should be preserved and the persons endeavouring to incroach upon the same should be discouraged; therefore the councill do unanimously, except one, approve of their treasurer his haveing hitherto advanced and laid out money off the common good towards the defence of the magistrats in the forsaid pleas, and so far as shall be furder necessar that way appoint him to advance and lay out the same till the issue of said pleas. Expence of processes before the lords.

30 June, 1739.

The councill considering that, by reason of the inhabitants throwing in redd, rubbish, or nastiness, into or so near by the syvours or run channells in the town as that the same when rain happens is thereby carried in to the Burrowmilln damb, that damb requires oftner to be casten than otherways it would; and they likeways considering that a great many vagrant persons and others given to pickery and stealing are intertained and harboured by some of the inhabitants of this place to the imminent danger thereof; the council Throwing redd into run-channells; intertaining vagrants.

Throwing redd into run-channells; intertaining vagrants.

therefore appoint a bank to be put thro' the town by touck of drum prohibiteing and dischargeing the throwing down any redd as aforesaid, under the pain of ten pound, and the harbouring or intertaining any vagrant, under the pain of twenty pound Scots for each transgression, toties quoties, attour being otherways liable and punishable according to law.

Anent the poor.

In obedience to the act anent the poor, the third of March last, Robert Napier, glover, gave in a list of what some of the inhabitants are willing to contribute and give weekly towards the maintainance of the town's poor; and the council recomend to each baillie in his quarter to cause order all other vagrant poor to remove themselves out of this place, upon their perill that they will be extruded the same; and in the mean time continue the furder consideration as to the reall town's poor till that be done.

21 July, 1739.

Act for a hospitall to the soldiers.

The magistrats and town councill considering that they presently want a house for an hospital to the sick of the military, and that there is good conveniency that way to be had in that house called the red tiled house belonging to collonell John Erskine of Carnock, they therefore authorize Thomas Glen, town treasurer, to take as much of the said house as will serve for the forsaid purpose.

28*th July*, 1739.

Anent absents from the councill.

The councill having considered that severalls of their members frequently either absent themselves from the councill altogether or do not punctually attend att the hour appointed, which retards and protracts the dispatch of their business very much, they for preventing thereof statute and enact that each member duely warned, and who shall either altogether absent himself from the councill or not punctually attend att the hour appointed without a lawfull excuse, shall be liable to a fine of half a merk Scots to be paid before he be afterwards allowed to take his seat in councill.

Anent the soldiers hospitall.

Appoints the clerk to write to collonell Erskine of Carnock to know if he will sett to the town the three uppermost rooms of the red tiled house in the Baxters Wynd for an hospitall to the sick of the military, at the rate of thirteen pound Scots yearly; and, as the rooff of the said house is presently insufficient, to acquaint him that the councill will repair the same if he will allow them to possess it while they be reimbursed of that expence by the rent in their own hands.

4 August, 1739.

It was moved in councill that the town's charters and other writes in the charter house are, as they are at present keept, in great disorder, and that it was necessar the same should be inventaried and the room where they are better fitted up for them, and the councill continue the furder consideration of this matter till the next diet of councill. Inventarying town's writes.

The clerk reported that in obedience to the act last diet he had wrott to collonell John Erskine of Carnock anent the three uppermost rooms of the ridd tayled house for a hospittall to the sick of the military, and that he had received his answere, that he was willing to serve the town in that particular but wanted to be informed as to the rent and reparations before he would enter into any bargain, and the clerk produced and read his missive to this purpose. The councill therefore delay this matter till they be furder advised by the collonell. Anent the soldiers hospittall.

The councill considering that the Back walk is presently insufficient in severall parts, they therefore recommend to Thomas Gillespie, late baillie, to cause repair the same. Anent the Back walk.

It being represented that the calseways leading throw the Friarwynd and to the shoar and Burrowmiln are at present in great disorder, the councill recommend to the dean of gild, conveenor, and John Burd, merchant councillor, to visite the same, and to report their judgement thereanent against the next diet of councill. Anent some calseways.

25 August, 1739.

The councill considering that the experiment that has been made for getting a well below the foot of the Mary Wynd for the greater conveniency of the inhabitants seems to answer, plenty of water being found there, they therefore recomend to James Wallace, late baillie, with the treasurer, to cause build the said well after the most safe manner for preventing children or any others falling in thereto. Well below the Mary Wynd.

Anent the representation and petition given in by [the incorporation of taylors, referring to acts of council in their favor dated 19 May 1645, 19 April 1647, [4] September 1682 and 28 August 1703,] the magistrates and councill statute and enact that in all time comeing the deacon of the said incorporation of taylors, and his successors in that office and bretheren for the time, shall Act and grant in favors of the taylors.

Act and grant in favors of the taylors.

have power to seise upon, take, and apprehend all manner of work wrought without the burgh and brought in thereto by unfreemen taylors, and to keep and detaine the same while they pay an unlaw of ten pound Scots, and where the work cannot be aprehended to call and conveen before themselves such unfreemen, and there after triall to unlaw them in the like sum of ten pound Scots, toties quoties, and to take caution of them to desist thereafter from so contraveening; and the said magistrats and councill likeways statute and enact that in case of an unfreemen taylor being found working within the burgh it shall then be in the power of the said incorporation of taylors to seise and apprehend the unfreeman taylor and his work looms, and to detaine him and them while he pay the forsaid unlaw of ten pound Scots, but no ways to seise or detaine the work if belonging to any inhabitant of this burgh. And the councill ratifie and approve of the former acts and intimations thereof mentioned in the foregoing petition, but only in so far as agreeable to the tenor of this present act and grant and no other ways.

15 September, 1739.

Annulling a sentence of the mechanicks.

Anent the petition and complaint formerly given in by Charles Alexander, wright in Sterling, shewing that he having been employed by Robert Anderson, baxter, to do some work for him, and having employed under him one Woolfart, a castle soldier, as plaisterer, John Miller, present overseer of the mechanicks, caused on the eighteenth of July last conveen a picked out number of the mechanicks fitted for his purpose; the rest who were not for violent proceedings were omitted. To this meeting the petitioner was warned; and there this court proceeded in a most arbitrary and illegal way, and without any the least proof they judged and put it to the vote and found that he had packed and pealed with an unfreeman, and therefore fined him conform to some irregular act of theirs, and, tho' the same was not mentioned, he was informed the penalty was no less than fourty pound; and furder, they discharged him from electing or being elected till he fulfilled that act; and therefore craving redress. . . . The councill having considered the same, they find the mechanicks sentence complained of to be both unjust and unwarrantable, and that the fact upon which the mechanick court proceeded being only employing an unfreeman to work under a freeman is not packing or pealing with unfreemen, which is the cause mentioned in the sentence; and therefore the councill cass and annull the said sentence in all time comeing, and suspend the same simpliciter for ever, and restor the petitioner in integrum thereagainst; and are of opinion that he is entitled to damages and charges, and reserve him action therefore as accords.

Annulling a sentence of the meechanicks.

miln, and having heard the report of a committee of their number, who inspected the said ingine, that the same answers the design, they thereiore appoint Thomas Glen, town treasurer, to give twelve pound twelve shilling Scots to the said James Reid for the forsaid contrivance and the expence of the ingine itself.

Distributing coals to the poore.

Baillie Thomas Christie gave in to the councill a letter to him from Sir Hugh Paterson of Bannockburn, generously makeing ane offer of causeing fourty loads of his small coalls to be delivered to such of the poore of this place as are thought to stand most in need thereof, and the councill appoint the said baillie Christie in their name to return Sir Hugh hearty thanks for his offer; and appoint the treasurer to cause bring in the said number of coalls at the expence of the town, and to deliver them to the severall indigent poore of whom a list is to be given him.

26 January, 1740.

£35 from lord Erskine distribute to the poore.

Baillie Thomas Christie represented and showed a letter from the right honorable lord Erskine, makeing ane offer of ten chalders of his coalls in compliment to the poore of the place, and the said Thomas represented that my lords factor had informed him that my lord had not at present the coalls to send up, for which reason he was satisfied to pay in the price of them being thirty five pound Scots, and that he the said Thomas haveing taken the mind of the magistrats thereupon they had agreed to accept of the money, and that accordingly the money was paid and distribute by the magistrats to such of the poore of the place as were most necessitous; and the councill having considered the forsaid representation and letter they aprove of the magistrats haveing received the money in lieu of the coalls and destribute the same as represented, and in token of their gratitude to my lord Erskine for so generous a compliment and charitable ane action to the poore in their present straitned circumstances, appoint the dean of gild in their name to write a letter to my lord acknowledging the same, and returning his lordship the councill, for themselves and in name of the whole town, their most hearty thanks for so generous a compliment and charitable ane action.

Anent the poore being furnished with meall and fyre.

The councill considering the very straitned and pinching circumstances of the poore of the place, both for meall and fire, occasioned by the long and extraordinary severe frost this winter, which still continues, they do enact that no mealmunger in the place shall keep any quantity of meall in their houses more than is sufficient for the maintainance of their families, but that they do lodge the same in the publick meall mercate, there to be exposed and sold each lawfull day of the week, for which end that mercate is hereby appointed so to be kept open that the poore may have an opertunity of being furnished with meall for their support, and that under the penalty of ten pounds Scots money to be paid by each meall munger contraveening this act, for each contravention of it, to the magistrats to be applyed by them for the use of the poore; and appoints thir presents to be instantly published through the toun by touck of drum, that none may pretend ignorance thereof, and so immediatly thereafter to take place. And the councill appoint the treasurer to furnish and keep a quantity of coalls in a cellar of his below that house in the Baxter Wynd possesst by Alexander Miller, baxter, for the use of the poore dureing the continuance of this frost, there to be sold owt to them by the town officers at a halfpenny the stone each lawfull day of the week; and appoints intimation likewise of this to be made through the toun, and that the poore will be so served in coalls upon Munday first and each lawfull day thereafter dureing the continuance of this frost.

Anent the poore being furnished with meall and fyre.

12 February, 1740.

The councill taking to their consideration that it has been recomended to them once and again by the presbetery to give a compliment to such young men as the presbetery appoint to preach in Sterling kirk from time to time during the vaccancy, they agree to the proposall, and doe hereby authorize their treasurer to pay to each young man who has preached in said kirk by order of the presbetery since last presbetery day, or shall hereafter do so during the vaccancy and the councills pleasure, half a guinea for each Sabath they have already since last presbetery preached and shall hereafter preach during forsaid space.

Half a guinea to each probationer preaching during vacancy.

The councill considering that it has been the practise of severall royall burrows to provide bibles to lye in their kirks for the use of the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener, which has not hitherto been observed here, do therefore appoint the treasurer to cause James Jaffray, stationer, provide seven bibles of a large quarto size, good print, handsomely bound and covered, to be used in the kirk by the provost, four baillies, dean of gild, and conveener, presently in being, and their successors.

Bibles to the magistrates, &c.

Plan of a court place.

The councill do authorize the magistrats, or any of them, to procure and lay before them a plan of a convenient court place in the clerks chamber, wher the magistrats present and to come may sitt in judgment.

Approveing act of taylors for orphans maintainance.

Anent the petition and representation given in by Hugh Lennox, [in name of the incorporation of taylors], shewing that the said incorporation having on the thirty first of January 1737, out of a pious and charitable designe for the better preservation of their stock, and for settling a fund for the benefit, maintainance, and education of orphans belonging to any of the incorporation, whether male or female, till they were capable to do for themselves, (a thing formerly very much neglected), voluntarly and most generously stented themselves and oblidged them to pay into the boxmaster six shilling Scots quarterly, or at least two shillings starling at the end of each year; . . . yet, notwithstanding all this, there are severall persons like to break up amongst the said incorporation, who, void of all charity and bowells of compassion, are making a bustle as if they would have this so charitable a work frustrated, which has been hitherto carried on with very good success, and may furder prove successfull and beneficiall for the good of mankind; and the petitioner and his adherents can see no cause for this bustle, if it is not this, that severall of the funds, which by the foresaid act are appointed to be laid out for pious uses, used formerly to be drunk, which it's hoped the councill would prevent by their sanction to the said act . . . The magistrats and councill find that conveener Lennox has done good service to his trade in making the forsaid application to the councill, because the forsaid act of the taylor court appears to be most just and reasonable in all its parts, and to be made out of a reall good intent and designe; and therefore they unanimously ratifie and approve thereof, and interpone their authority and sanction thereto.

22 March, 1740.

Middings on the shoar, &c.

It being represented that the commerce of the place is much impeded at the shoar by some of the inhabitants laying down their middings or dunghills there and on the way leading to the same, the councill therefore appoint such as have any middings or dunghills at present either lying upon the shoar or the way leading to it to remove and carry off the same betwixt and Tuesday morning nixt; . . . and furder, the councill prohibite and discharge the whole inhabitants from laying down their middings or fuilyie upon the shoar or way leading to it in time coming. Middings on the shoar, &c.

Appoints Thomas Glen, town treasurer, to cause Thomas Glass, wright, erect a court place and other necessars in the clerks chamber conform to the plann formerly shewn in councill. Court place.

14 June, 1740.

The councill having laid before them by Duncan Watson, merchantr, proposalls about the cleaning and redding of the Toun, Abbay, and Mainer foords, they recomend to the dean of gild to call a gild court and lay these proposalls before them and require their opinion in the matter. Anent redding the foords.

28 June, 1740.

A comittee having visited the town foord, they were of oppinion that the removeing the stones therefrom is practicable and that at a moderate expence, and that as the present season seems so fitt for doeing the thing, it was the oppinion of the committee that no time should be lost in falling about it, and that it was their opinion that a dozen of strong men with a sufficient number of iron and timber leauthers, picks, and ropes, &c., may be provided, as also a boat to carry anything away that may be thought necessary, and that proper persons may be appointed to oversee the workmen from time to time by turns; and the councill having considered the forsaid report, they approve thereof [and direct the work to be proceeded with]. Anent redding the town's foord.

19 July, 1740.

Baillie Thomas Christie represented that, as he had been desired by severals of the councill and others in the town, he had, when at Edinburgh as commissioner to the burrows, converst with one Mr. Campble, a person who understands that of raiseing water, and that in view to the bringing in the water from St. Ninians well to the town for the better service of the inhabitants; and that accordingly Mr. Campble had come to this place and made ane estimate of the expences of bringing in the watter from the forsaid well, and he, the baillie, had given him two guineas for his trouble. Anent St. Ninians well.

2 August, 1740.

Accompt for bibles.

The councill approve of a particular accompt of seven pound five shillings and sixpence sterling money due to James Jaffray, stationer, for furnishing bibles with covers to the provost, baillies, dean of gild, and conveener.

from the barbers, that the community as a collective body should have one voice in the call.

Report anent a clause in the act of relief.

6 September, 1740.

The magistrats and toun councill considering that they and severall other persons concerned did upon the third day of September current subscribe two calls, viz., one to the reverend Mr. Thomas Turner, minister of the gospell at Tullyallan, to be the first minister, and another to the reverend Mr. Daniell M'Queen, minister of the gospell at Dalziell, to be the second minister of this congregation; and that the very reverend presbitery of Sterling at their meeting upon the foresaid day have approven of and sustain the said calls as regularly and orderly proceeded in, and concurred therewith; the councill therefore [appoint commissioners to take farther proceedings in prosecuting the call].

Calls to Mr. Turner and Mr. M'Queen.

13 September, 1740.

The councill considering that they are frequently troubled with petitions for charity by reason of the present straitning circumstances of the time, they do therefore and for preventing the like while the straits continue, recomend to the baillies severally to draw precepts upon the toun treasurer or the masters of the Neather Hospital for charity to such persons whose necessity shall be made known to the baillie within the quarter where these do reside.

Distributing charity.

20 December, 1740.

The councill still considering the clamant necessity of the poor, by reason of the present scarcity and dearth of victuall, they appoint James Walker, toun treasurer, to advance twenty pound starling to Thomas Miller and Thomas Wordie, burgesses, to go through the country and buy meall to that value, and to bring it in and sell out the same in the toun to the poor thereof at the price the same beis bought in the country, and the buyers are to be considered for their pains.

Provideing meall for the poor.

25 December, 1740.

The magistrats and toun councill being conveened, and there being proposalls laid before them with respect to the supporting of the poor in this place and preventing their going abroad and publickly begging, and wherein it is proposed that each community in the toun should contribute weekly to the foresaid support, the councill therefore recomend to the conveener and remanent deacons of the seven incorporate trades to conveen their respective incorporations, and to the baillies severally to conveen the maltmen, mechannicks, omnigathrum, and barbers, and to the dean of gild to conveen the gildry, and that in order to know what they will agree to give voluntarly weekly in time cumming for supporting the poor and preventing their begging as said is.

18 April, 1741.

Transportation of Mr. Turner and Mr. Macqueen.

The councill considering the expence that the reverend Mr. Thomas Turner and Mr. Daniell Macqueen, ministers of this place, must have necessarly been putt to in the transporting themselves with their families and furniture from the respective parishes in which they were formerly settled to this place, the councill therefore allow to each of them 500 merks Scots for defraying the forsaid expense.

2 May, 1741.

Anent repairing the bridge.

It being represented that the bridge ledges are not sufficient, and that the safe guards around the pillars thereof are much carried off by the late storms and speats, and therefore ought to be repaired, the council recomend to the magistrats to have that affair under their consideration and to take proper advice how the same ought to be repaired.

30 May, 1741.

Regulating the beddal's dues.

Anent a petition giveu in by William Stivenson, beddall, shewing that, by reason of private buryings without previous intimation by the bell through the toun being now much come in fashion, his former perquisites are much reduced, and therefore craving a regulation with respect thereto; the council having considered the said petition, and it consisting with their knouledge that the beddall usually till of late years made intimation of each burying through the town at least once, and also attended with the bell at the burying, and that the gratification given him was one shilling starling at least for each of these times, except as to poor people which was only the half, viz., one shilling starling for both times; and therefore the council do statute and declare the foresaid usuall gratifications in the two different cases above mentioned to be the rule as to the beddall's exacting his perquisites or dues for burialls in all time comming, and that whether he beis employed to intimate the burying through the toun or not; and the council, as the said William Stevenson has craved, appoint Thomas Glen, chyrurgeon in Sterling, to deliver up to the said William the register of buryings that was keept by Patrick Downie, former beddall, and is now in the said Thomas his custody.

Regulating the beddal's dues.

The council having considered an objection in write formerly made by William Christie, one of the present baillies of this burgh, against James Jaffray, younger, merchant there, his acting or voting anyway as a councilor of the said burgh during his legall incapacity by being under the age of twenty one years and so minor, together with the ansuers in write made by the said James Jaffray to the said objection . . . , the council do incapacitate the said James Jaffray to be a member of the councill during his minority.

Incapacitating member of councill during minority.

12 June, 1741.

It was proposed that the weekly contributions for the poor should be continued as formerly till the first of October at least, and longer as the magistrats may see needfull; [and the magistrates and council recommended that the guildry, trades, and others, be convened] to have the above proposall under their consideration, and to make report what each trade or society will contribute weekly towards the maintinance of the poor till the said first of October, and longer as the magistrates shall see needfull.

Anent a weekly contribution for the poor.

11 July, 1741.

Anent the petition and representation this day given in by John Nicoll, present deacon of the incorporation of weavers in this burgh, for himself and in name of the remanent members of the said incorporation, shewing that the said incorporation have been immemorially in possession of searching the weekly mercats and fairs of the said burgh, by their deacon for the time being and the masters or others of the trade of the deacons appointing, for discovering of frauds or cheats in eln or tale of the worsted or linnen yairn that is brought there to be sold; and when any fraud or cheat has been found out in any of these kinds of yairn the constant practice has been that the samen has been apprehended and seized by the said deacon or those others of his appointment and carryed before one of the magistrats of the said burgh in order to condemnation; and after triall, and the baillie's finding the fraud or cheat either in the eln or tale, the yairn so apprehended and seized has been alwise confiscate and condemned to the apprehenders for behoof of the poor of the said incorporation, and besides the offender or person guilty of the fraud or cheat has been punished by the baillie in a fine and unlaw of five pound Scots money applicable as he thinks proper; that as this has been the immemorial and constant practice of the burgh in the above particular, so the said incorporation apprehends that the samen has been introduced for the publick well and utility not only of this place but of the liedges in general, and that the incorporation have been warranted thereto by the magistrats and council their authority, and if the records of council were lookt into it is thought the same would be found to be so, but the particular act or grant with respect thereto the said incorporation are not at present masters of an extract thereof, the samen having fallen by them; and that as the particular represented with respect to searching the mercates and fairs and seizing and condemning the yairn and punishing the offender in the manner above represented is a certain and indisputable fact known to the haill inhabitants, and that whether it shall be found to have been warranted by the councils authority or not, yet as it has so long obtained as to have become an immemorial custome or practice of publick well and utility, so it is necessary for the same reasone that the magistrats and council their approbation and confirmation of that custom and practice, and any former rules or acts thereanent, and authority for continuing the same in time comming, be had and interposed by the said magistrats and council by way of grant in favours of the said incorporation, and therefore praying to the effect after mentioned. . . . The magistrats and council having considered the representation and petition, and it consisting with the knowledge of severals of them that the custome and practice represented is true in fact, they therefore ratifie, approve of, and confirm all acts and grants in favours of the said incorporation with respect to the particular before represented, [and authorised the former practise of searching, seizure, confiscation, and punishment, to be continued].

7 November, 1741.

Act anent the right framing the accompts, &c.

The councill considering that the method wherein the publick accompts of the town and Cowans Hospitall have been framed for some time past, by the accomptants not charging themselves with any principall sumes or annualrents except as to these bonds whereof they have paid annualrent for that year, renders it quitt impracticable to discover the real state of the town or hospitall from the accounts themselves or such abstracts as can be made from them, and which may be of dangerous consequence unless suitably and timeously remeded, the councill therefore enjoin, order, and appoint the severall accomptants in all time coming, either for the town, Cowans Hospitall, Nether Hospitall, and Allan's mortification, that in making up their severall accompts for the future they do charge themselves with the haill principall sumes and annualrents due thereon to the term of the bonds preceeding the making of the accompts, and that they discharge themselves likeways with the principall sumes and annualrents that may be then unpaid of every particular principall sume, so that the haill principall sumes, with what annualrent is due on each of them, may distinctly appear from the face of the accompts; and the councill do appoint the town clerk for the future to make up regular abstracts of the severall accompts within fourteen days of their being fitted, so that they may be ready for booking so soon as the time is elapsed which these accompts are obliged to lye in his hands to be inspected by every burges that has a mind; and furder the councill declare that the foresaid accompts shall not be approven of in councill till once the foresaid abstract be booked.

Act anent the right framing the accompts, &c.

10 November, 1741.

The council, before proceeding to set the customs of the meall markett, do hereby enact that the ladle meall exacted in the meall mercate for the year the same is now to be sett be converted into money, as being judged more equitable both for the tacksman of that duty and these that bring the meall to the mercate, and that this conversion be as follows, viz., two shillings Scots for and out of each boll meall, and one shilling Scots for and out of each boll of pease and bear meall, and four shilling Scots out of each boll of shilled barley and grotts, and so in proportion for greater or lesser quantitys, and that in lieu and place of the foresaid ladle hitherto in use to have been exacted; but this conversion to be still without prejudice to the tacksman of the said market to exact his other dues conform to use and wont.

Custom of the ladle.

5 December, 1741.

The councill, as patrons of the Neather Hospital, appoint the masters thereof to give four pound Scots to Walter Stivenson, flesher, for the use of the bull that was furnished to the hospital park last season.

Advertizeing an escaped prisoner in the Gazett.

The council considering that William Young of Summerhouse, lately prisoner in their tolbooth, broke the prison and made his escape in the night betwixt Saturnday's evening and Sunday's morning last, they do therefore appoint the clerk to cause advertise the same in the Gazett, and that whosoever shall apprehend the said William Young and bring him back, so as he may be secured in the said tolbooth again, shall have five guineas of reward.

16 January, 1742.

Accompts for public spendings.

The councill considering that it is highly reasonable the particular cause of any publick spending, either off the revenues of the town, the Over and Neather Hospitalls, or Allan's mortification, for the future should be exprest in the accompts of these spendings, and not mentiond in the generall as about the towns hospitalls or mortifications business affairs or concerns, as sometimes has been hitherto practised, they do therefore statute and enact that in no time coming shall any accompt of publick spending, which does not particularly express and mention a speciall cause and occasion of the spending, be received in or approven by the councill, but the same shall be rejected albeit attested by a magistrate.

30 January, 1742.

Appointing John Gibb master of publick works.

The town councill as such, and as patrons of the Over and Neather Hospitals and Allans mortification, considering that it would tend much to the intrest and advantage of the town, the said hospitals, and mortification, that there were a particular person appointed to oversee the publick works belonging thereto, and understanding that John Gibb, late baillie, is willing to take that trouble without any sallary or gratification, they therefore nominate and appoint him to be master and overseer of all the publick works belonging to the town, hospitals, and the said mortification, during the joint pleasure of the councill and the said John Gibb allenarly, with this provision always that he shall serve gratis, and that the workmen to be employed to the said publick works shall be employed by the council and the said John Gibb jointly.

1 May, 1742.

Stone seat in back walk.

The councill appoint Laurance Keir, vice treasurer, to cause putt up a stone seat in the back walk, in such part thereof and with such an inscription thereon as William Edmondstone of Cambswallace, who first contrived the foresaid walk, oversaw the making of it, and has taken the trouble in keeping it in repair since, shall point out and direct. Stone seat in back walk.

The councill recomend to the magistrats, dean of gild, and conveener, to meet and call proper tradesmen to their assistance for considering what tools or engines are most proper and necessar for extinguishing fire when it hapens in the place. Fire engines.

31 July, 1742.

The councill having considered a petition given in by David Gillespie, David Portous, and William Wright, merchants in Sterling, craving that the councill would enact that the wooll sold in the town and carried forth thereof should be custom free, and that an equivalent should be imposed upon the wooll brought into the freemen of the town, they do statute and enact that in all time coming from and after Martinmass next the wooll bought from the inhabitants and carried forth of the burgh be custom free, and that from and after the foresaid time each pack of wooll brought into the inhabitants shall pay three shillings Scots of custom at the port at which it beis brought in; but with this provision, that the said William Wright do find sufficient baill that the common good of the town shall not suffer any hurt by this regulation, particularly that the customs at the bridge and Burrowsgate for the ensueing year after the said Martinmass next shall at least be sett at the same yearly rent that they were last sett at. Custom on wooll.

28 August, 1742.

The councill having considered a petition from Alexander Græme, hatter, setting furth that he had been imployed to make white colloured hatts to the four toun officers and drummer in May last as usual, and that altho he had made them yet they were still on his hands, and the officers and drummer provided in black coloured hatts, by reason of some misunderstanding that happened betwixt the said Alexander's wife and the treasurer while he the said Alexander was indisposed, the councill therefore, upon the said Alexander Græmes dying the foresaid hatts black, appoint the treasurer to receive them and to pay him four shillings starling for each of them, that they may serve for the ensueing year after May next. Anent the officers and drummers hatts.

The councill having considered an information and petition given in by severall maltmen and distillers in the burgh, setting furth that for some Impost on liquor called ginn or Geneva, &c.

Impost on liquor called ginn or Geneva, &c.

time past there have been considerable quantitys of that pernicious and destructive spirituous liquor commonly called ginn or Geneva, and which likeways now sometimes goes under the name of English brandy or Brittish spirits, imported into this burgh, sometimes unmixed and sometimes mixt with other spirituous liquors, and that the importation of the foresaid pernicious and destructive liquor still continues, tending not only to the hurt of the inhabitants and country about in general and maltmen and distillers in particular, but also to the diminution of the common good and revenue of the said burgh, the greatest part whereof arises from the brewing and distilling of malt; the councill do therefore unanimously statute, enact, and ordain that in all time coming there shall be levied out of each Scots pint of the foresaid spirituous liquor commonly called ginn or Geneva, or by whatever other name it may be called or go under, or of any kind of spirituous liquors with which the same may be mixt, the sum of twelve shilling Scots money, and so in proportion for greater or lesser quantities of the said spirituous liquor that shall hereafter be imported or found within the burgh, and that in place and in lieu of the converted multure that might arise to the burgh from the distilling of malt, if the foresaid pernicious spirituous liquor were not imported and vended to the discouragement of home brewen spirits, commonly known by the name of aqua vitæ, which are distilled from malt . . . [The impost to be applied] the one half thereof to the common good of the burgh, and the other half therof to such person or persons as shall inform, discover, and make appear the importation or the having of such spirituous liquors.

11 December, 1742.

Against setting houses without licence of a magistrat.

The councill considering that for several years past there have a great deale of poor people, strangers from the Highlands and other parts, taken up their residence in this burgh, who are not only unable to mantain themselves without begging but are idley disposed, and who alongest with their children are very oft given to piking, pilfering, and stealing, and some of whom take up hucksteries and victualing houses for soldiers, and under such pretence do frequently keep very bad houses, and that when any degree of dearth hapens such persons become exceeding burdensome to the inhabitants for their subsistance, as was found during the time of the late dearth, and that at present there not only are great numbers of people of the foresaid carracter still in the place, but are dayly increasing to the great hurt and prejudice thereof; therefor, and for remeading of this evil in time coming, the magistrats and councill do hereby unanimonsly enact, statute, and ordain that, from this time forth, no heritor, proprietar, or liferenter of houses within this burgh or territories thereof, nor their factors or doers, shall on any pretence whatsoever sett such houses, rooms, or lodgings, for long or short time, to any person or persons either at present residing within the said burgh or territories thereof or that may hereafter come to it, excepting only to actual burgesses, and to their relicts or children while unmarried, and to soldiers while quartered here, without first acquainting one of the magistrats of such their intention to sett, and having his licence and authority for that effect in writing, which is hereby ordained to be recorded in a register to be keeped by James Moir, the touns qnarter master, for that purpose, and that under the penalty of a years rent of the houses, rooms, or lodgings which shall be so unwarrantably sett, to be recovered at the instance of the said James Moir, or whoever hereafter shall be keeper of the said register, and applied at directions of the magistrats as they shall think proper; and the councill appoint publick intimation of this act to be made through the burgh by touck of drum on Munday first, that none of the inhabitants may pretend ignorance thereof.

Against setting houses without licence of a magistrat.

5 February, 1743.

The councill having considered a petition given into them by Robert Douglass, present deacon of the incorporation of weavers in Stirling, for himself and in name of the community, shewing that the stated and ordinar place of buying and selling yairn in the yairn market of this burgh was in the north side of the Broad Street betwixt the dounmost corner of the touns new house and the troan, and that all sellers and buyers of yarn has been discharged from selling or buying yairn in any other place within the burgh except in the foresaid place, both by acts of the town councill, acts of the justices of the peace, and acts of the said incorporation, binding and oblidging themselves not to buy yearn in any other part than the above mentioned place; notwithstanding thereof there has been of late several persons who have fallen into a custom of buying and selling of yearn both in the Baxters Wynd, Mary's Wynd, and other parts of the town, to the great detriment of those who are punctuall observers of the foresaid acts, and therefore Conveening gildrie and trades anent choosing a clerk.

The magistrats and toun councill taking into their consideration that the office of common clerk of the said burgh has now become vacant and at their disposal by the death of David Nicoll, their late clerk, and also considering that ane innovation has been introduced both in the said David Nicoll and his deceast father, who was also town clerk, their times, in appointing them clerks of the said burgh for life, contrair to the former antient and uniform practice of the said burgh by which the town clerks were annually elected, and that altho' this burgh suffered no inconvenience throw the foresaid two commissions, (the saids two clerks having both faithfully and dutyfully behaved in their offices), yet the granting of such commissions to subsequent clerks may sometime or other prove very pernicious and hurtfull to the interest of the burgh and be attended with great inconveniencies; for remeading of which the saids magistrats and town councill do propose that, previous to the nomination or election of any to be common or town clerk of this burgh, an act of the said town councill shall be made, statuting, ordaining, and appointing that in all time coming no clerk for the said burgh shall be chosen during life nor yet for any longer time or space at once than for one year, so that the election of the said town clerk shall be yearly hereafter at Michaelmas alongest with the magistrats and toun councill, according to the former uniform practice of this burgh so far as known and observed in the like case, and that whoever shall be chosen clerk of this burgh at this present time in room and in place of the said deceast David Nicoll shall be only chosen clerk untill the election of the magistrats and town councill at Michalmass first, and then, and at every subsequent annual election, the clerk to be chosen as aforesaid.

18 April, 1743.

Act appointing the toun clerk to be annually chosen.

The magistrats and town councill, resuming the consideration of the matters mentioned in their act the sixteenth current as to the election of the common or toun clerks of this burgh in time coming, and having received reports from the gildry and seven incorporate trades of this burgh all agreeing to the foresaid resolution of the town council and of their making an act to the effect, ends, and purposes therein mentioned and underwritten, therefore the saids magistrats and town council, after most mature consideration and deliberation, and by advice and approbation of the gildry and seven incorporate trades of this burgh, hereby enact, statute, ordain, and appoint that in no time coming any person or persons shall be elected, chosen, or appointed, jointly or severally, as common or toun clerk or clerks of this burgh during his or their life, nor for any longer time or space than from one year to another, so that the election of the said toun clerk shall be yearly hereafter at Michaelmas alongest with the magistrats and toun councill, according to the antient and uniform practice of this burgh observed in the like cases before that the deceast James and David Nicolls, late toun clerks, obtained commissions for their offices during life.

Act appointing the toun clerk to be annually chosen.

Thereafter the saids magistrats and toun council having proceeded to chuse a clerk for this burgh in room and in place of the said deceast David Nicoll, they did unanimously nominate and elect, and hereby do nominate and elect, Thomas Christie, commissar clerk of Stirling, to be clerk of this burgh and haill bounds and territories thereof, and to the bailliary of the water of Forth, sherriffship, royalty, and other jurisdictions, courts, and priviledges whatsoever, any ways pertaining and belonging thereto, and that till Michaelmas next to come; and the saids magistrats and councill hereby give, grant, and dispone to the said Thomas Christie ay and till the said time the said places and offices, profites, fials, emoluments, and casualities of the samen, to be uplifted, used, and disponed upon by him; with full power to the said Thomas Christie to nominate, authorize, and appoint deputes and substitutes under him for whom he shall be ansuerable, and to exerce all and sundry other things requisite and necessary anent the premisses which any other former clerk, or any such like clerk within the kingdom, did, might have or can do by law, consuetude and practice; and the said Thomas Christie being present accepted of the said office in and upon him and gave his oath de fideli as use is in the like cases.

Commission to Thomas Christie as town clerk.

Act anent addressing his Majestie.

The magistrates and town council of the said burgh being conveened, it was unanimously aggreed that this town should address his Majesty, and the clerk having given in the form of ane address the same was read and approven of, and he appointed to make out a clean copy of the same to be signed by the provost in name of the councill, and which the clerk is to transmitt to Mr. Erskine, member of parliament for the burgh, in order to be presented by him to his Majesty.

Paying for advice from an advocat.

The clerk represented that when lately at Edinburgh he had taken advice of Mr. Hary Hoom, advocat, anent some processes depending before the magistrates, and to form ane address to his Majesty, and had paid Mr. Hoom a consultation of fourty shillings, besides payment to his servants and some incidents extending to thirteen shillings sterling more. The councill, approved of what so done, and appoints their treasurer to refound him what so payed out.

£12 for curing a broken leg.

The councill having considered a petition of William Christie, son of the deceast Hary Christie, chyrugeon, for curing a broken leg of Charles Swords wife, they appoint the treasurer to pay him twelve pound Scots on that account.

Appoints the treasurer to pay to John Livingston, town drummer, three pound Scots for his extraordinary fatigue last winter. £3 to the drummer.

23 June, 1744.

The councill taking into their serious consideration the unlawfull and destructive practice of smugling, which for a long time past has been carried on and still continues to prevail in the country, a practice scandalous in itself and highly prejudiciall to the nation in generall and to the fair trader in particular, and which if continued in must tend to the ruin of this part of the kingdom; and likewise considering that by this illegal trade the grain of the country lyes unconsumed and the money that might be laid out in a profitable and useful way is laid out in that scandalous trade, do therefore resolve to the utmost of their power to discourage all maner of smugling whatever, and particularly the using of all foreign goods whatever, which are the produce of these nations with whom we are engadged in war, and that they will look upon all informers against smuglers as friends to their country and give them all due encouragement; and that this their resolution may be known to the whole inhabitants of this burgh, so as to excite them to enter into the like, they do appoint publick intimation to be made hereof through the town by beat of drum, and likewise to be advertised in the newspapers. Act against smuggling.

Reducing feu duty for site of linnen manufactory.

There was a petition given in to the councill from John Galloway, merchant, setting furth the benefite arising to the town from the linnen manufactory lately erected by him near the bridge, and craving, that for this and other reasons at length set furth in the petition, that the councill might either discharge the petitioner of the five merks as the few duty payable by him for the ground whereon the manufactory is built, or modify the same as they should see cause; which petition being duly considered the councill do unanimously aggree that instead of five merks the few duty payable by the petitioner shall be only half ane merk yearly, and that as well for the years past since commencement of the petitioners right as in time coming while the petitioners manufactory mentioned in the petition subsists and is carried on, but no longer.

Reducing feu duty for site of linnen manufactory.

There was laid before the councill a letter from the provost of Edinburgh to the magistrates concerning the linnen manufactorys, and desireing that the member of parliament for this district of burrows might be wrote to to concurr in every thing that might tend to promote and encourrage it, which the councill heartily aggreed to, and do recommend to their provost in their name to write to Mr. Erskine, their representative, anent the matter in the most earnest manner.

Act recommending linnen manufactorys.

2 February, 1745.

The councill having considered a petition of Thomas Wilson, town carrier, craving they might furnish him with a sett of bells for his carriage horse, as the carriers of severall other burghs were, they grant the desire of the petition, and authorize the said Thomas to get the sett of bells from the proper hand and the treasurer to pay the samen upon getting the accompt of the price and a proper receipt, and for which bells the said Thomas Wilson is to be accountable and lyable to deliver up to the councill or any succeeding carrier when appointed.

14 November, 1745.

Act anent addressing the King.

The magistrates and town council judge it expedient at this time to address his Majesty, for which purpose they recommend to the office bearers, with provost Christie and the clerk, and such others as the magistrates shall think fitt to call, to meet and draw up the form of ane address to be laid before the councill next councill day.

15 November, 1745.

Act approving an address to his Majestie.

The magistrates and town council being conveened, in obedience to the last appointment of councill there was presented before them ane form of ane address by the councill to his Majesty, which being read over the council unanimously approve of the form and appoint the clerk to write out the same in a fair hand, and the dean of gild in name of the council to subscribe it, and which address they think proper to be transmitted to his grace the duke of Argyle, with a letter from the dean of gild in their name desireing his grace to do the town the honour to present the address to his Majesty, which the dean of gild declared he would comply with.

2 December, 1745.

Discompt to a tacksman

The council having considered a petition of Alexander Bryce, late tacksman of the meal mercate, craving a discompt from last years tack duty thereof on account of the loss he sustained by dragoon horses being put into the meal mercate in August last, they allow him six pound Scots on that account.

28 December, 1745.

Act concerning passing at the bridge.

The magistrates and town councill takeing to their consideration that one of the arches of the bridge being now cutt by order of major general Blackney, and thereby access to and from the toun by said bridge intirely stoped, for which reason it will be absolutely necessary that boats be employed for ferrying over people, horses, and goods; and as the passage must be paid for, therefore the councill do fix and ascertain the rates for such passage to be as follows, viz., each person passing or repassing single to pay six pennies Scots for the passage; each person with a horse, one shilling six pennies; and each person with a horse carrying goods, victuall, or others, is to pay one shilling Scots and the custom in use to be paid at said bridge for such like goods and victuall; which rates the councill appoint to continue till they think proper to alter the same; and they appoint Robert Shearer, customer at the bridge, to officiate as boatman at said ferry, to whom the passage money is to be paid, he employing proper persons to assist him.

Act concerning passing at the bridge.

The councill being informed that there are severalls of the burgesses and inhabitants of the toun now in arms for defence of the place who are indigent and stand in need of subsistance, they therefore appoint the treasurer to pay to such indigent persons, according to lists to be given in by their respective commanders, the sum of eight shilling Scots each day such persons as shall do duty, and this to take place from the twenty fifth instant and to continue till the councill think fitt to provide for their subsistance otherwayes.

Subsistance to these in arms who are indigent.

8 February, 1746.

The council recommend to the magistrates, with the dean of gild and treasurer, to inspect the condition of the manse and grammar schoolhouse this day, it being reported that they were greatly damneaged by the rebells, and to make report next dyat of councill.

Anent the manse and school house.

The councill having considered a petition of Donald M'Laren, tacksman of the fish shambles, representing that the deals and traces belonging thereto had been burnt and destroyed by the rebells, they therefore authorize the treasurer to furnish what deals and traces are proper and necessary for the shambles.

Concerning fish shambles.

There was produced in council a letter of the date the sixth instant addressed to the magistrates and town council of this burgh and signed by Thomas Allan, representing that a quorum of the annual committee having then mett they thought it necessary that such of the members of that committee who were not at a great distance from Edinburgh should meet there on the thirteenth current to concert what measures were necessary to be taken for the wellfare of the burrows at this juncture, and particularly to name a deputation of their number to wait upon his royal highness the duke of Cumberland, and in the name of the royall burrows to congratulate his highness upon his arrival to the country and his success against the rebells, therefore expecting the council would send a member duely instructed to meet that day for these purposes; which being considered by the council they nominate and appoint William Christie, merchant councellor, late provost of this burgh, and who was their commissioner to the last convention of burrows, as their commissioner to meet and conveen with the other deputies from the burrows, who shall meet at Edinburgh the foresaid thirteenth instant, for the purposes mentioned in the foregoing letter.

10 February, 1746.

Concerning the conduct of the council in surrendering the toun.

There was produced in council the St. James's Evening Post, of date the 30th January, wherein there is ane account insert and which was read, highly reflecting on the magistrates and town council, and stuft with gross falsehoods and lyes concerning the surrender of this toun, at which the council were much offended, and therefore doe aggree and appoint a true and genuine account of the reasons and manner of the surrendry to be drawn up, and not only to be put into the newspapers but also to be at length ingrost in the councils books, that the behaviour and conduct of the toun may the better appear, and as nothing hitherto relative to that affair has been put in the council books, but only on papers apart;[1] and the clerk having acquanted the

[1] To supply so far the omission in the council book the following contemporary notices in the Scots Magazine may be quoted:—

"By the last accounts we gave of the highland army in our August Magazine, they were at Perth on the 9th of September. Thence they marched on the 11th, and on the 13th crossed the Forth a few miles above Stirling. On their approach Gardiner's dragoons retired to Falkirk. . . . Certain notice was received on the 15th in the morning that the van of the highland army was arrived at Linlithgow. . . . [Battle of Prestonpans, 21 September.] . . . General Blakeney having got notice that the rear of the men who conducted the arms, &c., from Montrose, were to pass the Forth at Alloa on the 30th of October, dispatched captain Abercromby from Stirling, with some soldiers and countrymen, to attack them; which they accordingly did, wounded some, took several prisoners, some cows, horses, haggage, arms, money, and letters; all which they carried into Stirling castle that night. . . . The town of Stirling has raised 400 men and put them under the command of Gen. Blakeney.

"About the beginning of December they [the rebel army in the north] gave out that they would cross the Forth, and talked of beseiging both Edinburgh and Stirling castles. On notice of this, Price's foot marched from Edinburgh on the 6th, and Ligonier's on the council that he had already, with the assistance of some others, drawn up a paper relative to the above, and the same being read over by him in councill, the members unanimously approve thereof and appoint it to be put in the newspapers and ingrost in the council books as aforesaid; and they likewise appoint the summonds sent to surrender the toun, with ane abstract of the paragraph foresaid from the St. James's Evening Post, to be also ingrost; and appoint the dean of gild, in name of the councill, to subscribe the paper to be sent into Edinburgh to put in the news, and desire the two ministers of the place also to sign the same.

Concerning the conduct of the council in surrendering the toun.

The summonds to surrender the toun being first in order, the tenor thereof follows:—

Summons to surrender.

CHARLES, Prince of Wales, &c., Regent of Scotland, England, France, and Ireland, and the Dominions thereto belonging: To the Provost, Magistrats, and Council of the Toun of Stirling.

9th, for Stirling. A body of the Glasgow and Paisley militia marched thither about the same time. The earl of Home commands the former, and the earl of Glencairn the latter. They were joined by the Stirling militia. The whole were posted so as best to secure the bridge of Stirling and the fords at the head of the Forth. . . . By a medium of several computations, the number of the rebels when they arrived at Glasgow (26th December, after returning from England) was about 3,600 foot and near 500 horse. . . . Their horses were poor and jaded; and six or seven hundred of their foot had no arms nor ability to use them. . . . Accounts from Stirling, dated December 23, say that there were then in that neighbourhood 800 highlanders from Perth, quartered at Down, Dumblain, and bridge of Allan. . . . Price's and Ligonier's regiments of foot, some of Hamilton's and Ligonier's [formerly Gardiner's] regiments of dragoons, upwards of 500 Glasgow militia, and 160 of those of Paisley, were at and about Stirling, guarding the passages of the Forth; but, on the approach of the highland army from England, moved thence to Edinburgh on the 23rd of December, leaving Gen. Blakeney with the garrison in the castle and 400 Stirling militia in the town. . . . Meantime Gen. Blakeney, having the rebels so near him on both hands, used the precaution to cut one of the arches of Stirling bridge. . . . After the troops that guarded the fords of the Forth moved to Edinburgh, Glengyle, with the help of floats (the boats having been all destroyed), passed that river at the Frew, and placed a guard on the south side. . . . The rebels now gave out they were to attack Stirling; and on the 30th, the cannon from Perth were moved towards that place. . . . On the 3rd of January the rebels marched [from Glasgow] for Stirling, one column by Kilsyth, and another by Cumbernauld. . . . Next day the army advanced towards Stirling, and were cantoned at Denny, Bannockburn, and St. Ninian's. The Pretender's son took up his quarters at Bannockburn, the house of Sir Hugh Paterson. . . . On the 8th the rebels got into Stirling, the inhabitants opening the gates as the town was not defensible. The militia made their escape by small parcels. Their officers, with all their arms, went into Summons to surrender.

Intending to take possession of our town of Stirling, we hereby require and command you to give our forces peaceable entry into and possession of the said town, and to receive us as the representative of our Royal Father, James the Eighth, by the grace of God, King of Scotland, England, France, and Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging; and as we have a list of all the persons now in arms in the said town, you are expressly required to deliver up to us all their arms, and likeways all cannon, arms, and military stores presently in the said town; assuring you hereby that if you refuse or delay to receive us, or to deliver up the arms and military stores aforesaid, and thereby oblige us to use that force which Providence has put in our hands, after our discharging one cannon against the said town no articles of capitulation or protection shall be given to any of the inhabitants for their persons, goods, and effects; and as the town is now blockaded on all sides, if any person therein now in arms shall be apprehended without the walls of the town they shall be carried to immediate execution. An answer to this is to be returned the castle, where, as was assured, Gen. Blakeney was well provided with men and provisions. At this time the rebels had no heavy cannon but two twelve-pounders, which, with great labour, they had brought round by the Frew. . . . By the 12th the rebels, having got all their cannon over the Forth, had broken ground between the church at Stirling and a large house called Mar's work, for erecting a battery there against the castle. The ports of the town were shut up, and guards placed at all the outlets to prevent people from coming in for, or going out with, intelligence to the king's troops. By the 14th they had got together two pieces of cannon of sixteen pounders, two of eight, and three of three, and were expecting four pieces more by water for their battery. They had also a great number of fascines, but had not been able to plant their cannon, Gen. Blakeney having fired upon them several times from the castle, and demolished their works. . . . [17th, Battle of Falkirk.] . . . Hitherto the rebels, not having got their cannon mounted, fired on the castle only with small arms from the houses, of which they discharged severall platoons on the 26th, but without doing any harm. But on the 27th they had two batteries erected; one at Gowan-hill, within forty yards of the castle, and one at Lady's hill. A drum had been sent round the town, with notice that every person that was taken near the castle should be shot; and that if any of the towns-people entertained any of the wives or children of the soldiers who were in the castle, they should be punished with military execution. Accordingly on the 28th they had three pieces of cannon mounted, which began to fire next morning. The battery at the Gowan-hill was erected under cover of wool-packs. By the fire from it the upper part of the walls of the castle was a little damaged. . . . Upon the 1st of February the rebels [after blowing up their powder magazine in St. Ninian's church] retreated precipitately from Stirling on the approach of the king's army. . . . They forded the Forth at Frew, and proceeded to Crief. . . The van of the king's army entered Stirling on the 1st of February, as did the duke next day. His royal highness was saluted by a triple discharge of the great guns of the castle, which he had so seasonably relieved. As an arch of Stirling bridge had been broke down by Gen. Blakeney's order, the army was obliged to stop till it was mended. By six o'clock in the morning of the 4th the arch was repaired, with timber mostly provided by the rebels for the same purpose, and that day the army passed over."

to our quarters here by two aclock afternoon this day. Given at Bannockburn, this sixth day of January 1746. (Signed) CHARLES, P.R. Summons to surrender.

Follows the paragraph in the St. James's Evening Post:— Paragraph in St. James's Evening Post.

Thursday, 30th January, 1745-6.

Having received more distinct intelligence of the surrender of the toun of Stirling, wee now inform our readers that tho' Sterling was sometime agoe ane open defenceless place, yet by the care of the brave generall Blackney the town walls were all repaired, additions made where necessary, all the avenues leading to it built up, severall deep trenches made, and every thing else so well provided for a siege that with so great a number of county militia, tounsmen, &c., under arms as were in it, firmly resolved to defend it at all hazards, the toun could have held out some moneths against the rebells had it not been for the treachery of the P——st, and the pussillanimity, dissafection, and cowardice of a few of the inhabitants, as appears by the following letter from a gentleman in Sterling writ the day the rebells entered the town :—

Sterling, dated January 9th.—On Thursday, January 2d, there bells approached this town, on which the gates were ordered to be shut and the militia, volunteers, and towns men put under arms for its defence. On Sunday, the 5th instant, at nine at night, the rebells sent a drummer to the east gate of the town with a message demanding the town to surrender to them on terms of capitulation, but the centinells, ignorant of the forms of war, fired severall times at the drummer, upon which he bauled aloud : I'm but a messenger ; and then ran off with all speed, leaving his drum at the gate, which the towns people towed up the walls and brought into the town. On Monday morning, the 6th instant, the rebells sent another person with the same message, upon which the P——st called a councill to see what was fit to be done, when he with a few of his council were for capitulating but the majority were for defending the town. Notwithstanding which the Provost and one of the counsellors went out in the afternoon to Sir Hugh Paterson's of Bannockburn, where the young Pretender lay, and stayed there till night. Letter to the Evening Post.

Next morning they called a councill and shewed them the terms of capitulation they had made, which were that the rebells were, on getting possession of the town, to harm no man's person or effects, not even those that bore arms against them, and to pay for everything they called for. On hearing which some more of the towns people were for agreeing to these terms, but the greatest part were for defending the town till generall Hawley's army came up to its relief, and the contest at last grew so high that Mr. Stevenson, the conveener of the trades, and the reverend Mr. Erskine, the seceding minister, took a protest against the capitulation, to which protest the greatest part of the town adhered.

General Blackney on hearing of this came down to the town and went round all the guards exhorting them to this effect :—" Gentlemen, be true to your religion, King, and " country, and defend your posts to the last extremity; and if you are overpowered by the " rebells, make a handsome retreat, and I'll keep ane open door for you."

Letter to the Evening Post.

On this the conveener caused the drum to beat to arms, upon which above 900 men, well armed, drew up in the mercate place before the general, who desired all those who were for defending the town to give three huzzas which was immediately done. Notwithstanding which, the P—st with two of the B—l—s went out again in the afternoon to the young Pretender to make some other agreement with them, but the general being informed of their design called all the militia up to the castle. Most of the volunteers on seeing this fled also up towards the castle, except part of captain Mains and captain Erskines companys, seceders, who placed centinels at the posts the militia left, and the conveener and severall others perswaded the volunteers to return to their posts, where they met with no disturbance except by 27 cannon shot which the rebells fired against the town, that did no other damneage but breaking a few chimney tops; the conveener and severall others going throw the guards all night, sword in hand, encouraging the men to stand out.

About twelve at night the provost and two baillies came to one of the gates, where they were challenged very hard, and carryed prisoners to the main guard, but keept no time there. Immediately a councill was called and a letter sent to the general shewing him the terms of the second agreement, to which he returned this answer.—"January 8th 1746. Gentlemen, I received yours. Deliver me up my arms and ammunition. Your humble servant." On this the conveener, with the captains of the volunteers, sent a letter to the generall telling him that if he would aid them with the militia as formerly, and head them, they would stand out the siege till our army came up, and that if he would give them orders they would send all these disaffected gentlemen to him. To which he returned this answer. "Gentlemen, as your P—st and B—l—s think the town not worth their notice to take care of it, neither can I. I will take care of the castle."

On receiving this answer nothing but distraction and confusion was to be seen among the militia, and which was heightened by the loud cries of the women and children on seeing the place so easily given up to a band of merciless villians. The militia seeing they could do no more towards the defence of the town went up to the castle about nine in the morning with their arms, lest the rebells should get them.

About eleven the gates were thrown open and the rebells entered at 4 in the afternoon, where they were not two hours before they broke the capitulation by breaking up and pillaging the shops of those persons that were most noted for their opposition to the Pretender.

Account by the magistrates and council of their conduct.

Follows the account of the conduct of the magistrates and town council relative to the surrendry of the town:—

Whereas a representation full of falsehoods, of the behaviour and conduct of the magistrates and town council of Sterling in giving the rebells entrance into their town, has been published in the St. James's Evening Post of date January 30th, the magistrates and toun council of the said burgh, and others concerned, think themselves bound in duty and many other wayes, to give a fair and open account of the matter, to prevent the bad effects of these impressions which ane account so stuft with falsehood tends to produce.

Account by the magistrates and council of their conduct.

Every one knows that the north part of the town of Sterling is open and without walls, having only some low fences encompassing gardens and parks. In the two large entries on that side a slight dry stone wall and gate had been built, and some of the entries to the gardens stopt up, and in this situation the Highland army came on towards the town on Friday the 3rd of January, and approach'd nearer on Saturday forenoon, and on that day quite surrounded it; and on the same day and some following they were joined by lord John Drummond, lord Lewis Gordon, the master of Lovat, &c., with their levies from the north.

Next day they were observed to cut down trees, fell to making fascines, &c., in order to raise a battery against the town, and that night about eight a drummer from the rebells came to the East Port beating his drum, whom the sentinels of the militia fired at and obliged to retire, leaving his drum behind which was towed in over the walls.

On Monday the rebells opened a trench and raised a battery within musket shot of the town, and at one o'clock the magistrates and town council received a summonds to surrender the town and give up all arms and amunition in it, with high threatnings in case of refuseall or delay, and ane answer was peremptorly required against two o'clock.

On this the town council and many of the inhabitants mett, when it was unanimously aggreed to send two commissioners with this verbal return to Mr. Murray, that as it was a matter of the outmost consequence they would chuse to deliberate on it till next day at ten o'clock. The commissioners were William Christie, one of the councellors, and James Jaffray, merchant, who returned with ane answer that the delay was allowed. In consequence of this the town councill, ministers, and many of the principall inhabitants and others conveened. The subject of their deliberation was whether it would be the wisest and justest conduct to continue the defence of the town against the rebells, or to give them entrance on terms, and here by far the greatest part of those present, and who are known to be as zealously affected to his Majesty King George as any in Brittain, gave it as their judgment that to continue the defence of the place would be a dangerous and fruitless attempt. Their reasons were,—the numbers of the rebells, now reinforced with some thousands from the north, and who had completed their battery of smaller cannon against the town, and had got two larger cannon cross the Forth that day, whilst the town had not a single piece of cannon of any size to help their defence; the small importance of the slight dykes and hedges on the north side of the town; the militia and townsmen their want of experience in military affairs, and whose numbers did not exceed 500, which, with the addition of 100 and a few more military, was the whole strength of men in arms within the town; the impossibility of their enduring continued fatigue much longer, since for three days and nights past they had been almost constantly under arms; the uncertainty of rendering effectual the retreat of those in arms to the castle when overpowered, notwithstanding all the provision that it was possible to make for them, since it appeared to them that such retreat might be cut off by ane assault in different places and in the higher parts of the town, and even in the event of their retreat the whole families in the town must be left to the fury of the rebells; the vast disparity between the rebells their entering on terms and their entering by assault, the consequence of which last must have been that our streets would be strowed with the corpses of the inhabitants and others, and the whole effects in the town become their plunder; and it was judged that to run such a risque when in a state of uncertainty as to our relief from the army, which in fact only came to Falkirk in ten dayes thereafter, and when neither the publick cause nor any material branch of it depended on our defence of the town for a little time longer, would be highly imprudent, and that it would be great misconduct in the council not to make offer of terms of surrendry; (and the event of the armys not coming up to Sterling till conducted by the illustrious Prince the duke of Cumberland plainly shows that we must have been quite undone had we stood to the defence). After long reasoning from the above topicks the councill inclosed and aggreed to return the following answer,—that as the message received was a summonds of surrendry at discretion, the toun council could not aggree to any such surrendry, but that they would offer the following terms: that there should be no demand made on the revenue of the town, absolute safety to the inhabitants in their persons and effects, particularly to those of them who had been in arms, and that all arms, &c., in the town should be delivered into the castle. However it was after this found expedient that the deputies should carry out the first part of this answer without any mention of the above terms. This they did accordingly and the answer gave great displeasure, as the deputies reported to the councill on their return. Afterwards the councill, together with the ministers and others present, resumed the consideration of the above terms, and our present situation being again seriously considered, and for the reasons fully narrated above, the councill aggreed to nominate other two deputies, to witt Peter Stevenson, one of the present baillies, and John Jaffray, merchant, to go out with the former two, with the above terms to be proposed, which they did, and on their return reported that they were accepted of tho' with great difficulty as to the article of delivering up the arms to the castle. Before their return, and at eight that night, the rebells made 27 discharges of cannon from their battery on the town.

Account by the magistrates and council of their conduct.

Account by the magistrates and council of their conduct.

Next day the arms were conveyed into the castle by nine in the morning, and the rebells entered the town about three in the afternoon.

Remarks on the account published in the above mentioned Evening Post:—

Remarks on the account in the Evening Post.

It is nottour that the toun was neither provided in meal nor fewel so as to stand a siege for eight days, far less some months, no manner of stores having been laid in nor even the inhabitants provided as usual by reason of the disturbance in the country. Every one who has seen them may know how slight the defenses were on the north side of the town.

On the letter:—There has been no provost acting in town since Michaelmass last, the gentleman then elected to that office not having hitherto accepted of it, and as to the gentleman pointed at in that scurilous paper and said to be in that station, and there charged with treachery, wee and all others of his particular acquaintance doe well know how malicious and unjust such a charge is, being fully sensible of his firm attachment to the present government, and satisfied with his whole conduct in this affair. At the first meeting after receiving the summonds nothing was spoke concerning a capitulation by any one person whatever. The deputies in carrying their messages never once spoke with the Pretender's son, or were so much as in a room with him, nor transacted anything separately but alwise together and in exact complyance with their instructions from the council, which they strictly keept to, so that the reflections pointed against them in the paper are to the last degree unjust and malicious. Mr. Erskine, the seceding minister, was not with the council after Munday night when he at first aggreed to sending out the above terms, but afterwards at his leaving the company receded from that measure tho' not in the way of a formal protest, nor did any one man in the company enter a protest, so that the tale "of his protesting and the greatest part of the town adhering to it" is absolutely false. The number of men in arms in the town is marked in the above narrative, and on the Tuesday morning (referred to in the paper) not one third of them were on the streets.

It is not worth while to make a remark on the insinuations of pusillanimity and dissaffection thrown out against some persons in that scurilous paper, who most heartily despyse them and their unknown author.

Upon the whole, from the above account the impartial world will easily judge whether the conduct of the town of Sterling is not to be approven off, and will clearly see how injuriously the magistrates and town council have been represented in the scandalous account of that matter published in the above paper, the author whereof has keept himself behind the curtain, as is the manner of gross slanderers, whereas we subscribe our names to this paper and are ready to vouch the particulars of it.

Declaration by deacon convener and a councillor.

Wee, Walter Stevenson, present deacon conveener of the trades of Stirling, and William Wright, councellor, doe hereby declare that after we had seen the numbers and strength of the rebells who were to have attacked our town, and for other reasons, we were soon sensible of our mistake in opposing the measures of the town council, and that in place of holding out against them for some moneths, we could not with all our force have done so for many hours; and we do now heartily thank the town council for the measures they took for our preservation and safety, and we know that those who were in the same mistake with us are now of our sentiments on this head. (Signed) Walter Stevenson, Wm. Wright.

Burgestickets for duke of Cumberland and Prince Hesse.

The council considering that it was some time agoe resolved upon to offer his royal highness the Duke of Cumberland and his highness the Prince of Hesse the complement of the town, and that in order thereto two burgess tickets have been made out properly embelished and gilded; but it being judged proper that these tickets should be put and delivered in boxes made for the purpose, the council therefore aggreed that a silver box, richly made and gilded, be prepared for each of these tickets and capable to contain them and the seal, and that the town's arms, to witt the wolf on the craig, be engraved on each of these boxes, and all done and execute in the handsomest manner and with all dispatch. Burges tickets for duke of Cumberland and Prince Hesse.

The council finding that Robert Dickie, one of their town officers, has not given attendance as ane officer for some time past, and besides is suspected as keeper of a house for entertaining of thieves and vagabonds, they therefore do dismiss him his office as town officer, and nominate and appoint in his room and place Duncan Drummond, indweller in this burgh, to be one of the town officers thereof. Town officer.

3 May, 1746.

The council having heard a petition of Thomas Campbell craving reparation for some losses sustained by him occasioned by the rebells being here, they allow him thirty pound Scots on that account. £30 for loss through rebels.

Appoint their treasurer to pay to John Hall, coalman, nine pound Scots for his trouble and losses while the rebells were here. £9 to John Hall.

2 June, 1746.

Appoint their treasurer to give to James Weir, merchant, six pound Scots to help to defray the expence of sending his son to Moffat wells. Moffat wells.

Appoint the treasurer to pay to Mr. Ker, jeweler, ten guineas for the two boxes for the Duke of Cumberland and the Prince of Hesse their tickets, and half a guinea for making out the new ticket to the duke. Duke of Cumberland and Prince Hesse's tickets.

The council having heard a petition from Andrew Wood, burges, craving the liberty of taking clay out of the clayholes belonging to the burgh for making of brick, they grant him that liberty during their pleasure only, but discharge him to incroach upon the ground on either side. Clayholes.

7 July, 1746.

The council judging it expedient that they should adress the King upon the victory obtained over the rebels at Culloden, and the form of an adress having been presented and read in council they approve thereof, and appoint the clerk to extend and the dean of gild in name of the council to sign the same and to transmit the adress to Mr. Erskine of Grange, member of parliament for this town, with a letter in name of the council desiring him to Act for addressing the King.

Coal and candle to the Hessians quartered at St. Ninians, &c.

The council considering that when in March last there was such a number of Hessian troops quartered in this place as that the town was not able to accommodate them, and that Mr. Napier, sheriff, being applyed to to ease the town and quarter some of said troops in St. Ninians and Torbrex which was accordingly done, and that Mr. Napier had represented that coal and candle had been furnished to these troops by James Watson in St. Ninians and James Wands in Torbrex, of which he had engaged to see them payed, the council therfore appoint the treasurer to pay the saids persons what so payed out by them.

2 September, 1746.

Guard roume at the bridge.

It being represented that the place where the bridge guard is kept was in great disrepair and uninhabitable, and that the general had complained thereof and desired that another guard room should be provided, and the magistrates having yesterday gone to the bridge and found the necessity of having another guard house, the council therefore appoint the treasurer to cause build a house for that purpose at the west end of the bridge kiln of sixteen foot length within the walls, and to cause cover the same with slate, and to provide what materials are necessary thereto, and to cause this be done without delay.

6 September, 1746.

Act approving accompts.

Approve of an account of £124 4s. 6d. of expences of solemnizing the King's birthday in October last; and one of £74 16s. of charges debursed at solemnizing the Duke of Cumberland's birthday.

£30 for carts taken by the rebels.

The council having considered a petition of William Main, tenant in Arns of Clackmannan, and of Malcolm M'Allom, John Dason, Andrew Morris, and Thomas Younger, tenants to Lord Erskine, auent the loss they sustained by having their carts taken away by the rebels when they came into Stirling with coals, the council agree that the forenamed persons have thirty pound Scots towards satisfying their losses.

10 November, 1746.

The magistrats and toun council being conveened for setting the annual customs, they do enact that all the inhabitants in the toun who are burgesses are to be frie of any dues for any roots, cabbages, and greens, growing in their yeards and sold by them in the mercate; that each merchant retailing barly in his shop is only to be lyable in payment of twelve pennies Scots for each boll thereof of meall mercate dues, in place of four shilling formerly paid; that each boll of bear brought in to the town by unfreemen to be sold is to pay twelve pennies Scots of meall mercate dues, except for what sold to merchants or maltmen in the town; and that each boll bear brought into the town to be sold by any burges who is neither merchant nor maltman is to pay six pennies Scots per boll, except for what sold to merchant or maltman as aforesaid. Town customs.

It being represented that the iron gate at the bridge stands in need of repairing, and that the supporters of the iron gate at the Burrowsgate are so ill fixed that unless care be taken thereof the iron gate would fall; the councill therefore appoint the treasurer to cause the necessary repairs be made. Mending bridge and port gates.

2 May, 1747.

The council recommend to the treasurer to meet with the tacksman of the butts and settle with him as to the grazing of the first ministers cows, and they appoint him to allow Mr. M'Queen, the second minister, the benefite of grazing a cow gratis in the Nether Hospital park taken by the town. Anent grazing the minister's cows.

The council having considered a petition of Andrew Johnstone, merchant and innkeeper in Stirling, craving allowance for the losses he sustained and inconveniences he was put to by the officers of the military mounting guard, their having a room in his house as their guard house since June last, the council therefore allow him thirty six pound Scots on that account. £36 to Andrew Johnston; guard house.

20 June, 1747.

The council appoint the treasurer to pay to the woman who keeps the two children belonging to the military left in this place, twelve pound Scots per quarter, commencing from the time she got them, discompting alwayes [what] she has already received, and the treasurer is authorized to provide the children in cloaths as easy as possible. Supply to some poor children.

Precentor's and kirk officer's dues of baptisms by Ebenezer Erskine.

The council having considered a petition of Adam Steuart, their now precentor, and John Bowie, session officer, anent their being intituled to the dues of baptisms of the children of the inhabitants within the burgh performed by Mr. Ebenezer Erskine, they find the saids persons intituled to the dues of these baptisms in the like manner as of those children baptized by the ministers of the place, and warrand them to call for and uplift the same accordingly, and to use all legal methods for inbringing thereof.

1 August, 1747.

Act approving accounts.

The magistrates and town council approve of the following accompts, viz. of one to Patrick Keir, wright, for £29 3 s. 8 d.; one to William and John Simpsons for £32 8 s., for quarrying stones; one of £53 18 s. spent at solemnizing the Prince of Wales's birthday; one of £101 4 s. spent at the solemnity of the Prince of Orange being chosen Stadtholder; one of £58 10 s. spent at celebrating the battle of Culloden; one of £67 8 s. spent at solemnizing the Duke of Cumberlands birthday; one of £36 18 s. spent at entertaining the lords of justiciary in May last; one of £188 4 s. spent at solemnizing the King's birthday; one of £134 17 s. paid out by the treasurer for oyle; and ordains and allows the treasurer to pay and discharge himself therewith.

17 October, 1747.

Act anent the hand bell.

The council having considered a representation of William Stevenson, beddall, anent the insufficiency of the hand dead bell, they appoint the treasurer to provide a new one and to give the old one in exchange and pay in the difference of the price.

Act concerning rebuilding arch of the bridge.

The provost produced in council a letter he had received yesterday from lieutenant general Bland advising that he, the general, had received his Majesty's commands for repairing the bridge of Sterling, according to the proposals made by the magistrates, on their entering into a contract with the general for it; therefore desiring the council might send a proper person to the general duly authorized to sign the said contract, on which payment would be ordered, as the letter sets forth. The council therefore do appoint, authorize, and empower John Jaffray, provost, and Patrick Stevenson, dean of gild, forthwith to repair to his excellency the general at Edinburgh, and in the first place, in their name and that of the whole community of this burgh, to give the general their most hearty and sincere thanks for the many favours and repeated friendships he has been pleased on all occasions to show and testifie towards this town and its particular concerns, and particularly in the matter of repairing the bridge, a piece of friendship which ought never to be forgotten; and next, in name of the council and community foresaid, to enter into and subscribe with the general such contract as he shall please require concerning repairing of the bridge of Sterling, and on such terms and conditions as the general shall prescribe and think most necessary towards forwarding and compleating this undertaking. Act concerning rebuilding arch of the bridge.

26 March, 1748.

The provost and dean of gild reported that, conform to appointment and direction of the council, they had signed a contract with lieutenant general Bland concerning rebuilding the arch of the bridge, which contract they produced and the samen was read in council; and the council do not only unanimously approve of what done and transacted by them in the matter, but furder do authorize and impower the said provost and dean of gild to transact and aggree with proper persons and workmen to rebuild the said arch and to furnish all necessary materials for that purpose in the easiest and best manner, and finally to transact, aggree, and doe every thing necessary and requisite towards forwarding and compleating the work as the council themselves could do, and as they, the said provost and dean of gild, shall think and find expedient and for the advantage of the burgh. Act concerning the bridge.

The councill appoint the treasurer to give each of the four town officers and four sherreif officers and constables twelve shilling Scots for their trouble in warning and pressing horses and carts to carry away the military baggage. Carrying away baggage.

7 January, 1749.

Appoints the treasurer to give John Steuart and George Chalmers, souldiers, who suffered lately at blowing up of a rock at the foot of the Fayer Wind, three pound Scots, provided they leave this town. Act for £3 to two souldiers.

Appoints the treasurer to pay to John Blair and Thomas Henderson, brewers, five shillings sterling for ale furnished by them to the persons who assisted at extinguishing the fire lately at the foot of the town, by the provosts order Act for paying some ale.

4 March, 1749.

Act concerning the bridge gate.

The council considering that the arch of the bridge is now quite finished, and judging that it would be very convenient that the gate at the north end of the bridge were widened and enlarged, the samen being too low and strait, they therefore nominate and appoint the provost, [and five others], as a committee to consider of the most proper way for doing of this, and to agree thereanent as they shall see cause; they alwise reporting to the council what they do in the matter.

Renewing roof of the tolbuith.

The council taking to consideration the insufficiency and bad condition of the roof of the tolbooth, and that the town is put to great charges yearly in mending and repairing the same, they therefore agree that the said roof be new sarked and covered with skailzie, and authorise the treasurer to provide for the doing thereof accordingly.

22 April, 1749.

Landlords giving up lists of their tennants.

The council considering that their act and appointment, the 11th December 1742, discharging the heretors, proprietars, or liferenters of houses within this burgh, to sett the same to strangers, has not been observed, whereby a number of bawdy houses are set up in the place, and thieves and resetters of stoln goods harboured therein; therefore the council do ratifie and renewe the said act, and appoints the clerk to make out extracts thereof to be read in the church and meeting house by the precentors the morrow before dismissing the congregation in the forenoon, and by beat of drum thro' the town Munday next; and furder the council statute the same of new, and appoint the several landlords, proprietars, or liferenters, betwixt and the fifteenth of May next, to give in to the town's quarter master signed lists of their tenants, their names and imployments, under the pain of being prosecute for contempt of authority.

Anent the first minister's cows.

The council considering that the first minister of this place has been refused liberty of putting his cows to grass in the Kings Park or butts for some years past, as he and his predecessors immemorialy have been in use to do, they therefore appoint the thesaurer in their name, with the clerk, to require access to the park for the ministers cows, under form of instrument, from the keeper or taxman thereof, and to protest against him in case he refuse.

10 June, 1749.

Act concerning a corn market.

The council taking to consideration the usefulness of a corn market in this place, which has been often spoke to, do therefore recomend to the provost and magistrats as a committee, and such others as they shall think fitt to advise with, to meet and consider of the matter, and bring in an overture concerning the same to the council against the first Saturnday of August next.

Act concerning a corn market.

It being represented that the steel miln, which has been this long time past used at the burow milns in grinding of malt, is now useless and unfitt for the purpose, the council therefore appoint the thesaurer to dispose of the said mill to the best advantage, and procure and buy a new one fitt for the purpose.

Act for a new steel mill.

The council having considered a petition given into them by Alexander Brymer, present deacon, John Runciman and John Harlay, overseers, and Thomas Thomson, present boxmaster of the society of gardiners in and about the town of Stirling, for themselves and in name of the other members of the said society, and as authorised by them conform to an act the eighth of June current, craving the sanction of the town council to their meetings and annual elections, so as the same might not be lookt upon as contrary to law and unwarrantable, for the reasons at length sett forth in the petition; the council having deliberate on the petition, and judging nothing thereby craved to be contrair law or reason, do therefore grant the desire of the petition and appoint the clerk to give the petitioners an extract of this act and of the petition given in for their warrand.

Act in favour of the gardners.

1 July, 1749.

The council appoint the thesaurer to pay to (blank) Townly, bellfounder, two guineas for his trouble and charges for soldering a rent in one of the kirk bells.

Kirk bell.

28 October, 1749.

The magistrats and town council, considering there is a summonds before the lords of session execute against the council concerning the customs, particularly those of horse, nolt, and sheep, exacted by the town and their customers, they appoint the clerk to look into the towns chartors and writs for what chartors or writs shall be found necessary to be produced for defending the town against this prosecution, and when this is done they will give him furder orders and directions theiranent.

Plea of the town as to customs.

23 May, 1750.

Concerning a place for the cow market.

The council appoint that the cow market at the fairs of this burgh for hereafter be held in the vaccant ground betwixt the downmost houses at the Whins and baillie Galloway's new factory house, and recomend to baillie Thomas Gillespie to see this put in practice the morrow, being the fair day.

10 October, 1750.

Sherrifs encroaching on the town's privileges.

The magistrats and town council being informed that doctor Stirling had applyed to the sherrif of Stirling to have a dispute concerning the gavel of the house betwixt the said doctor and John Finlayson, sherrif clerk of Stirling, their properties determined by an inquest to be appointed by the said sherrif, and that the sherrif substitute had sustained himself judge in the debate, and as a preparatory step to his appointing an inquest ordained John Finlayson to be cited before him, which was done accordingly; this procedure of the sherrif the council look upon as most illegal and unwarrantable, and an encroachment on the right and privilege of this burgh and of the town council, who have the sole and privative right and privilege of calling and appointing inquests and cognoscing and judging in disputes concerning incroachments on propperty within burgh and what appertains thereto; and that the sherrif never had or was ever known to have or exercise any jurisdiction of that sort or pretended to any before within this burgh, and by his procedure now showed as much as he could his contempt of the council and their authority, which contempt they are determined to oppose and resent as far as law will allow; and in order to this, they recomend to the provost, for himself and in name of the council, to protest against the said sherrif substitute in propper form and for remead in law.

11 October, 1750.

Report concerning the encroachment.

The provost reported that, in complyance with the appointment of council, he had taken a protest against Mr. Bryce, sherrif substitute, yesterday while said sherrif was sitting in judgment, which the council approve off.

Act for an inquest to commissary Finlayson.

The council having received in a petition from commissary Finlayson, craving an inquest concerning a dispute betwixt doctor Stirling and him, they recomend to the baillie of the quarter, dean of gild, and conveener, to cause warn an inquest as craved on Saturnday the thirteenth instant at two in the afternoon, and appoint doctor Stirling to be furnished with a coppy of the petition, and to be cited to attend said time.

15 December, 1750.

Report having been made by the committee to whom the consideration of the state of the towns affairs was recomended, of their opinion theranent, the councill agreed to said report, and in order to extricate the town from its incumbrances so far, have come to the following resolutions, which they agree and appoint be put in practice. Regulations concerning the towns affairs.

1. They recomend to and injoin the town thesaurer to be in diligence to recover payment of the outstanding debts due to the town, at least such part thereof as are recoverable.

2. They do prohibite the thesaurer or any member of council to imploy workmen, or to undertake any publick work above £3 Scots of expense, (and these only in case of urgent occasion), without an order of council; and that before any such work is undertaken, the council or committee of their appointing first visit and find its necessity; and that this be also observed with respect to the hospitals.

3. That no magistrat (except the eldest for the time, and that only in case of urgent necessity,) give or issue warrands or orders on the same for charity, as it tends to misapplication of the town's common good thro' importunity to magistrats, and ones not knowing what or to whom another orders charity.

4. That no gild or burges tickets be given by any magistrat or magistrats (except to persons of distinction or officers of the army lying in the place) without order of council conveened for that purpose, who may delegate one or more of the magistrats to bestow that complement, and that any tickets otherwise given be void, and the giver censurable; and this for several obvious reasons, such as to prevent solicitations to magistrats, to save the town's common good, and out of regard to the privileges of the gildry.

5. That the interest of the principal sums due by the town be, from and after the term of Whitsunday next, reduced to four and an half per cent.

6. That in order to lessen the publick expense and prevent impositions, every magistrat is to order the accounts of his spendings on the town's account to be brought into council the first Saturday of the quarter ensuing, to be then read; and if this is not done the town is not to be lyable.

7. That for hereafter no weekly or other pensioners be installed on the town, as the continuing in a contrary practice may be evidently of publick disadvantage.

Regulations concerning the towns affairs.

8. That all accompts as to publick works be brought in, and read in council, the first council day after the work is finished.

18 May, 1751.

Passing the streets with horses and carts.

The magistrats and town council appoint proclamation to be made thro' the town by beat of drum, strictly commanding all the burgeses and inhabitants of the town passing the streets with horses and carts, that they lead the horse by the head and not suffer the horse to go with the cart, to the endangering of children and other persons on the streets unless they be led as said is, under the pain of five pound Scots to be payed by each person acting in the contrary; and the customers at port and bridge are injoined to intimat this to all carters passing these places into the town with horses and carts.

Selling an iron gate.

Appoints the thesaurer to sell the old iron gate of the bridge, by way of roup, upon the twenty eight instant at twelve of the clock forenoon, and to cause intimate this thro' the town Friday next.

Anent unentered burgeses.

Appoints the thesaurer to cause warn such of the inhabitants who are able and have not been admitted burgeses of the burgh, to appear in council next council day and enter and admit burges, otherwise they will be expelled the burgh.

22 June, 1751.

Petition for a creek at Ruddery Pow.

The council impower the provost in their name to subscribe and cause present to the barrons of exchequer a representation anent settling a creek or landing place for this town at the Ruddery Pow.

3 August, 1751.

Anent burges tickets.

The council finding that that part of their act and regulations anent the towns affairs, agreed unto by the council the 15th of December last, so far as concerns the magistrats not giving of burges tickets (except to persons of distinction and officers of the army residing in the place) without order of council, has not been strictly observed, do therefore, the more to enforce the observance of that act, statute and enact that the clerk shall at no time hereafter give out any burges tickets to any magistrate or magistrats without authority of council contrair the intent and meaning of the foresaid act, except to persons of distinction and officers of the army foresaid, as he shall be answerable to the council.

5 October, 1751.

The council finding that there has been some dispute concerning the dues demanded at the troan, do statute and enact that the following table is the rule by which the troan dues are to be collected and uplifted by the taxmen therof present and to come, viz., for weighing of each stone butter, 2 s.; each stone white wool from near plaices, 2 s. 8 d.; each stone lint, 2 s. 8 d.; each stone cheese, 1 s.; each stone tallow, 1 s.; each stone foul wool from near hand plaices, 1 s. 4 d.; each stone of feathers, 1 s.; each pack of wool from far off plaices, viz., thirty or fourty miles distance, 12 s.; all Scots money. And each freeman is only to pay the half of the above dues. Act settling the tron dues.

2 November, 1751.

The council considering the inconvenience occasioned by writing of the infeftments given within burgh and territorys in Latine, and being informed that such infeftments given in Edinburgh and Glasgow are now wrote in English, do therefore agree and enact that all infeftments, hereafter to be given by the town clerk off and concerning any subjects within this burgh or territory thereof, be wrote in English, so as the same may be the better understood, excepting only where the warrant of said infeftment is in Latine. Act appointing the sasines to be wrote in English.

12 February, 1752.

The provost represented that he had wrote colonel Haldane, member of parliament for the burgh, to apply and obtain a clause annext to the turnpike act intended for the shire, for liberty to take down the outshots and fore stairs in the Mary Wynd in terms of the act of parliament past in March, 1707[1], and had got answer from the colonell that the councill behoved to Fore stairs in Mary Wynd.

[1] The following is the act of parliament referred to:—"Our Sovereign Lady, considering that the easiness and pateney of high roads to, through, and from royall burrows, eoneerns the policy of the kingdom, and that the eommon passage through the toun of Stirling (a place of great frequency and where her Majestie has her royall eastle and pallaee) is greatly impeded by severall forestairs or outshots in the street or wynd called Mary Wynd, so as neither coaches nor loadned carts or wains ean conveniently pass, therefore her Majesty, with advice and consent of the estates of parliament, statutes and ordains that the magistrates of Stirling shall, betuixt and the first day of May next, take down the said forestairs or outshots and build stairs to the said houses so that the street may not be incommoded, and that at the sight and with the approbation of the earle of Mar, lieutenant collonell John Erskine, commissioner for the said burgh, and Sir John Areskine of Alva, or any two of them."—Acts of the Parliaments of Scotland, vol. xi., p. 483, cap. 86, 25 March 1707.

Fore stairs in Mary Wynd.

petition the house of commons for that purpose: which the council agree to do, and appoint the clerk to draw up the petition by advice and direction of the provost and William M'Killop.

15 February, 1752.

Act concerning the poor.

The magistrates and town council again resumeing the consideration of the state of the common poor who dayly or weekly go from door to door asking alms, they, after consultation with the several kirk sessions of the place and their thesaurers and other persons best acquainted in these matters, find that the very great burden upon this place of the begging poor does not arise from those in the burgh intituled by law to charity, but is chiefly owing to vagrants from the Highlands and the poor of neighbouring parishes who without permission enter the burgh, and mixing themselves with the poor thereof unjustly and undistinguished obtain the charity of the inhabitants who are no way intituled thereto, to the prejudice of industry and the industrious; for remedy whereof the said town council, after takeing lists of the poor have delivered to those of the place they judge deserving, badges bearing the impression of—Sterling Poor,—and the numbers; and of these a list is keept by the clerk of the burgh. And the magistrates and town council in virtue of their own powers and those committed to them by law, doe expressly prohibite and discharge all persons whatsoever in or without the burgh of Sterling who are not already found intituled to and furnished with the badges foresaid, or who shall not be upon due application furnished with the like, from begging or asking alms within the town and territorys thereof, from this day forward untill thir presents be formally altered or rescinded; certifying transgressors that they will be committed to the house of correction erected in this place, to be employed at hard labour for such time as the magistrate committer shall ordain and appoint, or subject to any other punishment of his direction; and certifying also to those furnished with the badges that they be liable to the like certification unless they go only on the Saturdays in a body together at asking charity, and wear the badges on their outer garment, or if they part with their badges to any other; and that thir presents be the more strictly observed the inhabitants are hereby discharged from bestowing alms on begging poor not provided with such badges, or in case of failyie that they be liable in payment of half a crown, toties quoties, to be applyed at the discretion of the magistrates.

16 March, 1752.

The magistrats and town council being conveened, and it being represented that there are some repairs necessary to be done to the tolbuith and hangman's house, they appoint the theasurer to cause do the same.

Repairing tolbuith and hangman's house.

14 October, 1752.

The council being sensible of the great trouble and hardship that lies upon the carters in and near this burgh, by their being pressed from time to time with their horses and carts for transporting the baggage belonging to the different troops that pass and repass this burgh, and that frequently in harvest and seed time, and that the government allowance is not equall to the common hire, they therefore appoint the provost, bailies Alexander and M'Killop, with the treasurer, to lay out three pound sterling amongst the saids carters as they deserve it.

£36 Scots to the carters.

Settlement of the estate of James Darou, burgess.

The year of our Lord one thousand four hundred and seventy first, and the penult day of the month of November, the fifth indiction, the first year of the pontificate of the most holy father in Christ and our Lord, lord Sixtus the Fourth, by the providence of God, Pope, the twelfth year of the reign of our most excellent sovereign lord, King James the Third, the most illustrious King of Scots, in presence of the provost, bailies, and councillors of the burgh of Strivelin, and me notary public, and witnesses underwritten, within the tolbooth of the said burgh, compeared a provident man James Darou, burgess of the said burgh, and said and set forth how he had conquest, by the assistance of the grace of God, all his goods, movable and immovable, domicile and heritable, acquired by him of his own industry; and whereas after his decease he had no heir begotten of his own body to enjoy the said goods, nor had he any brothers german alive, as he clearly understood, therefore he constituted, made, created, and nominated Richard Darou, his brother, to be his heir, if he should not procreate a son or daughter of his own body in lawful marriage, of all and sundry his goods, movable and immovable, viz., utencils and domicils bestowed on him by God, and of all and whole his tenement and heritages, all the best manner, way, right, and form as he could and ought; reserving, nevertheless, the franktenement of the said goods and the foresaid tenement with the pertinents to him and Jonet his spouse and the longer liver of them. Witnesses: Matthew Forestar, James Redehucht, dean of gild, John Brady, Adam Bully, Duncan Forestar, bailies, John Heycht, Robert Fersitht, Alexander Murra, Herbert Murra, Walter Aysoun. And in like manner the said Jonet constituted Murella her daughter, and spouse of the said Richard, her heir of all her goods whatsoever.

Settlement of the estate of James Darou, burgess.

17 January, 1471-2.

Chaplainry of the altar of the Holy Cross.

A discreet man, Sir Richard Brady, chaplain, craved instrument that twenty five persons of the community of the said burgh said simpliciter that they have delivered to him the service of the altar of the Holy Cross; the remaining persons of the said community, to the number of thirty persons, said that the resignation to be made therein by Sir William Bully and his procurators of the foresaid service in favour of Sir Richard Smethsoun, if the said Sir William has been dispensed by the Apostolic See at the time of the reception of his orders, should be of strength, force, and moment but otherwise not; and upon this the said Sir Richard Smethsoun took instrument. Present: the Provost and bailies, James Schaw of Salchy, Sir John Colquhon of that ilk, David Crychtoun of Cranstoun, William Strivelin of Keyr, Robert Fersith, John Daroth; witnesses, with others divers.

25 February, 1471-2.

Revocation of a gift.

In presence of me, notary public, and witnesses underwritten, personally compeared a provident man, Andrew Symson, and said and asserted that notwithstanding that he had been formerly circumvented and defrauded by certain partial persons, and slidden, through error, of the excessive infirmity of his age, on the bed of his sickness, had made a certain pretended and simulated alienation of his annual rent of twenty four shillings yearly to be uplifted and taken from all and whole the tenement of Walter Aysoun, lying in St. Mary's Wynd, within the burgh of Strivelin, between the land of the late William Bolat on the east side, on the one part, and the land of Bernard Halden on the west side, on the other part, to Walter Symson, his second begotten son, in prejudice, loss, and detriment of James Symson, his first begotten son, for a certain sum of money delivered to the said Andrew and afterwards by the said Walter incontinent taken away from him; wherefore, with his own mouth, he revoked, cassed, and annulled for ever the aforesaid pretended alienation and resignation and gift of sasine of the foresaid annual rent; and thereupon, for the cassing and breaking of the pretended sasine, yea more truly, as he asserted, intrusion of the said annual rent taken and received by the said Walter, he delivered and gave, with effect, to the said James Simson, his dearest first begotten son, his whole and full power. Present: master Robert Forestar, vicar of Kilmoronok, Sir Robert Mure, Adam Bully, then one of the bailies of the said burgh, James Redehucht, Richard Mure, David Cosour, Alexander Nortoun, burgesses of the said burgh, and Dugal Cosour.

Trading of lieut.-governor of Stirling Castle.

[The dean and council having received information that Lieut. Col. John Erskine, lieutenant governor of Stirling Castle, being only an honorary burgess and gild-brother, had upon that pretext taken upon him to traffic in all sorts of merchant wares, recommend Provost Dick, the commissioner to the current parliament, to take advice of the commissioners from other burghs, or the most knowing and experienced merchants amongst them, what would be the most proper means to be used by the guildry for suppressing and stopping the governor's trafficking, and also, if need be, to take the advice of a lawyer.]

20 January, 1694.

The new levy.

[The town council having asked the guildry to recommend the best and easiest way of raising and "outreiking" the town's proportion of the new levy (being seven men), the guildry remit back to the council to take such methods as they shall think most fit and expedient, and declare their willingness to pay their proportion of the expense.]

3 March, 1696.

African trade.

[Two acts of parliament having been passed (26th June and 17th July, 1695), granting special privileges to a company for trading in the East and West Indies, the Straits, and the coast of Africa, and for allowing burghs and incorporations to join the company, the guildry, seeing that several burghs had given considerable sums of money for carrying on the Indian and African trade, and that in all probability it would contribute to the advantage as well as honour of the guildry to join and unite with the said company, unanimously voted £200 sterling for that purpose. Bond of association signed on 27th April.] African trade.

30 December, 1696.

The quhilk day, the said provost having conveened the gild council upon receipt of a lyne from the den of gild, who is for present at Edinburgh for defence of the gildrie's priviledge against the trades, for sending east to Edinburgh King David's chartore in favoures of the gildrie, with the great ring gifted by him to them for evidencing the antiquitie and right of the gildrie, the said gild council have instantlie delivered to David Moir, servitor to the said dean of gild, ane attested double of the foresaid chartore, with King David's ring, as also ane principal charter, granted by King James to the guildrie, that the same may be produced to the effect foresaid. King David's ring. Act for sending some of the gildrie's evidents to Edinburgh.

26 February, 1698.

[The advice of the guildry having been asked by the town council as to the casting down and repairing of the tolbooth steeple and taking in a ruinous tenement on the east side, belonging to the hospital, they approved thereof, and consented to the continuance of the merk upon the boll of malt by way of voluntary offer, so far as they were concerned, to the cost of the necessary work.] Tolbooth steeple.

14 October, 1704.

[Unfreemen forbidden to take fore-shops in case gildbrethren may give as much for them as unfreemen really pay or offer to pay.] Foreshops.

10 September, 1705.

[The brethren refuse the desire of the mechanics to erect a loft above the scholars' loft, as being prejudicial to their accommodation in the kirk, and as it will also be prejudicial to the poor of the kirk of Stirling.] Mechanics' loft in the church.

10 May, 1707.

[The town council having offered a purse of silver to be run for on the fair-day (in order to assert their rights), the gildrie agree to give a gold ring to be ridden for at the ring by the dean and other twelve gildbrethren and any strangers who shall think fit to ride therefor. The dean and treasurer to put what motto shall be most proper on the said ring.] Gold ring to be tilted for at the fair.

31 December, 1718.

Cutting for the stone.

[£36 Scots allowed to defray part of the expense of cutting a guildbrother's son in Dalkeith for the stone. Two additional grants were subsequently made for the same purpose.]

9 March, 1724.

New weights.

[The treasurer to send the standard of the guildry's old weights to Edinburgh to be adjusted conform to the weight used for weighing Scotch and Dutch merchant goods, and likewise to get made a fine sufficient small baulk for weighing 4 lb. weights or thereby.]

14 January, 1731.

Provision for third minister.

[From a statement of what the council had done in regard to providing church accommodation, it appears that they offered the present ministers of the place a sufficient gratification if they would undertake to preach in both churches, which they refused to do. Then they tried if such improvements could be made on the east church as would afford accommodation to those wanting seats, but it was found after inspection by skilled persons that this could not be done. A remit was afterwards made to a committee (consisting of members of all the incorporations in the burgh) to consider how a lasting fund should be provided for payment of a yearly stipend to a third minister, which committee reported that in their opinion the stipend should be 1200 merks Scots, payable out of the converted multures, and further suggested that for better security the converted multure should be perpetuated at 18 s. 8 d. Scots for each boll of malt, being the present rate. The guildry adopted the recommendations, and passed an act thirling themselves and their successors of new to the common mills, viz., the bridge and the burgh mills, and binding themselves to pay the converted multure of 18 s. 8 d. per boll of malt, "providing always that the said converted multure shall be applied for payment of the town's debts, second and third ministers' stipends, schoolmasters' salaries, drummers' and pipers' fialls, king's cess, public works of the burgh, and other public burdens, except quartering of the military, watching and warding, and the outputting of persons of men to the militia." The guildry also made a provision that as soon as the town's debts were paid off there should be a reasonable diminution of the converted multures.]

8 November, 1735.

The trade in yarn.

[A committee appointed to meet with the weavers for the purpose of drawing up a petition to the trustees for improving the manufactories in Scotland, that they might obtain an act of parliament to regulate the trade in yarn. The weavers' petition sets forth that by great quantities of insufficient yarn, particularly from the south country, being brought into Stirling and surrounding district, which will neither work nor dye aright, the serges, plaids, and other woollen manufactures—the greatest, if not the principal branch of trade in the burgh and country round about—are much out of request, and have turned to little or no account abroad, and the prices thereof are reduced to one-third less than they gave nine months ago, which, if not speedily prevented, must undoubtedly ruin that great branch of trade, and render many hundreds both in the town and country round, and such as live in the town, to be necessarily burdensome to it. The trade in yarn.

Form of petition and proposals read to guildry on the 15th November, and ordered to be laid before the council, with a request to submit it to the trustees, supplicating them to make suitable application for having the aforesaid grievances remedied, and prevented in time coming.]

13 October, 1739.

[Instructions to visitors of the market appointed annually:—1. That they detect and complain of all hawkers and travelling chapmen vending and retailing all sorts of merchandise in houses or taverns. 2. That they detect and complain of all tradesmen within the burgh buying and selling any sort of the goods they do not make themselves, such as weavers buying serges in order to sale; skinners buying hides in order to sale without changing the nature of them; tailors selling cloth, silk thread, buckram, mohair, buttons, &c.; and all other tradesmen merchandising, 3. That they discover all merchants within the burgh packing and peiling with unfreemen, viz.: merchants dealing conjunct trade with tradesmen, &c., and also that they discover all country traders buying serges, &c., off the market days.] Market visitors' instructions.

21 June, 1740.

[The guildry being convened in consequence of an act of council anent the redding of the toun, abbey, and manor fords, appointed a committee to visit the toun ford this afternoon, and report to the council in writing how far the redding of it was practicable.] Redding of fords.

5 December, 1747.

[The guildry taking into consideration a custom that has prevailed for a long time past of allowing the provost of the burgh when he is first chosen into that office the benefit and dues of the entry payable to the guildry of any stranger who first enters after the choosing of the provost, and as they look upon this to be very detrimental to the interest and common good of the poor of the guildry, and that Present to the provost discontinued.

Present to the provost discontinued.

they can find out no just cause or reason why such custom was introduced, they therefore, by plurality of voices, rescind every act or acts of guildry allowing and authorising the said practice or custom, and declare the same void and null and of no effect in time coming.]

[1] The following acts were passed by the Town Council in November, 1681 and 1682:—

"7 November, 1681.—The proveist, bailies, and counsell, haveing at lenth considered the maltmens opinion anent the bringeing in of the beare to the mercatt to be sold, and also considering the great expenssis the toun has bein at in buildeing and makeing of ane maill mercat, they have thought fitt that the bringeing of the grains afterspecifeit to that place and payeing the impostitions therupon in manner underwrittin will doe advantage to the toun and make up some of their expenssis, and therfoir they ordain that upon Friday next, and in all tyme comeing, the haill corne, malt, peese, and beanes, to be brought to this brugh and sold theirin, shall come to the said place now called the maill mercatt, and each seck of maill, malt, peese, and beanes shall pay for their doun setting and ronme in the said mercatt twell pennies Scottis, by and attour the former dewes, and the corne to pay as formerlie; and which imposition upon the seck of maill, malt, peese, and beanes is to be joyned to the tack of the peckis. And als have ordained that noe maltman nor others buy any beare befoir it be brought to the said place called the maill mercatt (noblemen and gentilmens fermes excepted). Or if they buy any in the countrie that they bring at least ane bag therof to the said mercatt place. And that each six furlots of beare, alsweill brought in as not brought in, pay twentie pennies Scottis in satisfaction of all dewes at the said maill mercatt. And this imposition to be joyned to the tack of the laidle. And that noe neighbour buy malt from persones outwith this burgh whill it com to the said mercatt place on the Wedinsday or Friday, the ordinar mercatt dayes, and pay the foirnamit new imposition. And the selling of corne in the said mercatt is to begin at nyn houres in the morneing, and of all other graines at twell houres."

"9 November, 1682.—The magistrats and councill having explained the exception of nobilmen and gentilmens fermes, exeimed frae the new imposition upon the victuall to be brought to the maill mercatt, they find that the exception is onlie of those who have at least ane thousand pund Scotts or ten chalder of victuall."

[2] In 1685 "The merk on the boll of malt, the half merk upon ilk boll in name of multore, and the impost, all sett to William Houstonne, cordiner, for ane yeir for £5,000." In 1686, "in respect that the merk on the boll of malt, half merk of multore, and impost, could not be sett, and that noe persone wold offer therfor, they appoint the same to be collectit weekly." After this the impost does not appear in the annual let of customs.
